Whitehall wants to cut jobless teenagers' benefit

By Anthony Bevins, Political Correspondent

The Government's determiwork", was confirmed yesterday by a senior Whitehall source.

The Treasury has identified parental housing costs and rental allowances for young people as prime targets for cuts as part of the public spending purge, which is designed to find savings of up to £5,000m for the next financial year, 1984-85.

It was stated yesterday that the specific saving might amount to only £100m, but it was emphasized that the "in-centive effects" were as impor-ant as the public expenditure

Anti-Walesa campaign stepped up

Warsaw (Reuter) - A Polish Government barrage of mockery and insults against Mr Lech Walesa, the leader of the banned Solidarity free trade union, reached a new high point this weekend as the union's third birthday approached.

The campaign to discredit Mr Walesa was stepped up as the threat of a possible new confrontation open between the Government and Solidarity activists on the anniversary of the strikes which led to the union's creation.

A clandestine committee of shipyard workers has called for a national go-slow starting on Tuesday if the Government has failed to start new talks with Mr Walesa today. The authorities have categorically ruled out such a meeting, linking Mr Walesa with suggestions that it should take place. The authorities appear specially sensitive to Mr Walesa's potential for exciting fellowworkers and his support for Western trade sanctions.

The Government's plans for trade union legislation do not go far enough in some areas and in other aspects are too partisan and anti-union, according to an editorial independence. Serious disagreements have emerged in the Civil and Public examination of the proposals published yesterday by the Social Democratic Party.

Dr David Owen, the party leader, said that the Government was in danger of squandering the best chance to put fairness and efficiency into industrial relations with proposals that were "a strange mixture of the half-hearted and one-sided

The SDP is particularly critical of the Government's decision not to insist on secret postal ballots in the legislative plans for compulsory elections of union executives.

Dr Owen said unrepresent ative elements in the unions could best be defeated by postal ballots. "Communists and Trotskyists are past masters at manipulating delegated democracy and sensible trade unionists have been fighting for many years the sort of conduct represented by the Cowley moles". he said.

He was also highly critical of the Government's reluctance to bring in measures making it easier for union members to opt out of paying the political levy and of the plan to hold discussions with the TUC on self-regulating measures.

Dr Owen believed that the

Claiming the authorship of several of the policies put forward in the White Paper last month by Mr Norman Tebbit, Secretary of State fo Employ-ment, the SDP says it is clear that the trade unionists, 60 per cent of whom voted for parties other than Labour in the general election, want both union reform and industrial democ-

The SDP is particularly critical of the absence of any mention of industrial deomocracy in Mr Tebbit's proposals which, it believes, goes hand-in-hand with union reforms.

Moderates hope to curb Tebbit law revolt

Moderate union leaders were confident last night that their moves to modify militant union opposition to the Government's proposed new labour laws would succeed at next month's annual TUC conference (our Labour Correspondent writes).

Strong opposition to right's attempts to open a dialogue with Mr Norman Tebbit, Secretary of State for Employment, on his legislative plans can be expected from several unions, including the train drivers, miners, the white-collar Association of Scientific, Technical and Managerial staff, and white-collar engineering workers and construction workers. But one of the architects of the right's initiative, Mr Alistair Graham, general secretary of the Civil and Public Services Association, said last night: "We have some good argu-ments to make to the Government and the public, so let us not get caught up in this Scargill-type of rubbish about people going to prison." His union has tabled an amendment to the agenda for the Blackpool congress. Informer's mother to plead for his wife

By Richard Ford

Mrs Eileen Hill, mother of the Irish National Liberation Army informer, Henry Kirkpatrick, is expected to meet him in jail today to persuade him to retract his evidence and

His step-father, Mr Richard Hill, freed from being held by INLA last week, confirmed that
Kirkpatrick had asked to meet his mother during a visit by a member of the family. The family was awaiting permission form the prison authorities for Kirkpatrick's mother to enter the Crumlin Road jail, where he is being held.

An INLA gang which has been holding Mrs Elizabeth Kirkpatrick, aged 24, has threatened to kill her soon unless Kirkpatrick withdraws statements implicating people in terrorist crimes.

Only days before Mr Hill, and his half sister, Diane, were released after being held hostage by INLA, Kirkpatrick told his terror gang's kidnapping was "a bluff". But it was reported that he had thought about reconsidering his position if the terrorists released Diane and showed their "good faith".

Mrs Hill has made several appeals to terrorists urgine them to release the informer's wife. She has been held since the beginning of June after being abducted by hooded men from her parents' home in west

"I wish to God they would show her the same compassion and let her go too. Please, maybe he would see sense if they would let her go. Maybe he feels cornered and if they would only let her go, he may see sense then," Mrs Hill says.

Kirkpatrick saw a relative on Saturday in a visit arranged before the abducted pair were released from a house in co Donegal last week,

However, Kirkpatrick is in an unenviable postion. Failure to withdraw his statements could result in the death of the woman who had married only four months before his arrest. But if he does retract he faces a lifetime in prison because he has been given five life sentences after admitting murdering three members of the security forces.

He was also given 992 years concurrent in jail for 72 other terrorist offences, including eight attempted murders, six conspiracies to murder and membership of the INLA.

The new cash and capital limits are a direct result of the public spending cuts announced the Chancellor of the Exchequer on July 7, one week after the DHSS had announced long term growth plans for the next decade, which allowed an extra 0.5 per cent a year on average. Those plans are de-scribed this month as a "Government blueprint for private medicine" by the British Medical Association's News Review.

It argues that 0.5 per cent will not be enough to meet the costs of growing numbers of elderly people and advances in medical technology, which the Government accepts requires an extra 0.7 per cent a year more than the rate of inflation. People are being put at risk because PVC-covered electrical cables, with high smoke and fume emission, are still being installed in public buildings, according to a leading consultant engineer.

"Every time you read a story about a bad fire, more people die as a result of being suffocated than by the fire itself," Mr David Wood, senior consultant engineer with Buckle and Partners, said.

"There is no reason why a new type of cable, which came on the market about 18 months ago, that has a low smoke emission and virtually no noxious fumes, should not be used in places like airport buildings, shopping arcades entertainment centres, hospitals and hotels," he added. "They add only about 1.5 per cent to the cost of the electrical installations, but there has so far been no move by the Government to make their use compulsory.

He said that at Heathrow airport the new terminal four building had specified that PVC-covered cable should not Lebanon have provided the first evidence of how, in an incident still described as a military secret by the authorities in Tel Aviv. Israeli aircraft mistakeniy bombed one of their own tank units in the early stages of the soldiers.

Although military spokesmen in Israel still refuse to discuss the incident, Israeli sources in Lebanon have confirmed to The Times that there was "a tracic accident" when Israeli jets over the Bekaa Valley carried out an air strike on their ground forces in June last year.

The attack took place six miles south of Lake Karaoun in the lower Bekaa on June 10, four days after the invasion began, when an Israeli tank unit was fighting its way northwards against Syrian army and Palestimian guerrilla forces. A battalion medical officer.

rebels to meet Stone

From Nicholas Ashford

Left-wing guerrillas in El Salvador have arranged to hold talks with Mr Richard Stone, president Reagan's special envoy, during the next few days. They have also agreed to meet the Salvadorean Government's national peace commission.

Señor Alberto Arene, Washing-ton representative of the Revolutionary Democratic Front/ Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, came at a time when the United States i stepping up diplomatic as well as military efforts to bring an end to the fighting in El Salvador.

Señor Arene did not reveal which of the Guerrillas' political leaders would meet Mr Stone or where their talks would be held. He did say, however, that the venue would be in a Latin American country.

Arrangements were made with the help of the Presidents of Costa Rica and Colombia. The State Department has declined any comment about the meeting on the grounds that it does not discuss Mr Stone's plans in advance. An attempt by Mr Stone to meet the guerrilla leaders early last month came to nothing. He later held "preliminary" talks with a representative of one of the five guerrilla goups that have been fighting against the US-backed Government of El Salvador since 1979.

Washington maintains that it will not negotiate directly with the guerrillas, but will only try to facilitate talks between them and the Salvadorean Government. The Salvadorians set up the peace commission to encourage the guerrillas to take part in elections due earlier this year.
The guerrillas are however, insisting on direct talks with the US, which they regard as one of the parties to the conflict.

Ankara veto Muslims get infuriates party leader

Ankara (Reuter) - The banned leader of a new Turkish political party, in one of the most outspoken attacks on the regime since the 1980 coup, has accused the ruling generals of not intending to restore democ-

"It seems a return to sound democracy will not be realized at the announced date . . . it will be rather difficult to explain this to the nation, which has democracy at its heart," Mr loony said in a statement.

It was prompted by the virtual elimination from Gen-eral elections set for November 6 of two front-running new political parties, the Social Democratic Party and the right-

the urban problems facing one of the world's oldest and largest cities, ROBERT HOLLOWAY, Our Cairo Correspondent reports on the efforts to improve the sewcrage

"If I were ruler of Egypt, Napoleon Bonaparte is reputed to have bragged, "not one drop of the Nile would flow into the sea." There have been times this year when Cairenes wished only that the waters, blackened stinking effluent, would vanish from their streets. Built before the Secon World War, when the city contained fewer than two million people, the sewers are hopelessly inadequate for a population which is both six times as large and better housed. Lack of maintenance, moreover, has caused silting in tunnels and the failure of a single pumping station can mean immediate and widespread flooding.

Last winter, when a breakdown deprived a million inhabitants of the middle-class suburbs of Mohandessin and Giza of water and in some cases electricity for 10 days, the World Health Organization threatened to categorise Cairo an insalabrious zone and President Mobarak appeared under television are lights in the fetid streets to declare an

While one species of fish, tillarpia, is said to thrive on the efficient, the conduit will be unable to cope with the tripling of the flow predicted in the year 2000.

Despite a legal prohibition, sewage from the west bank is now being poured into the river, only six miles downstream from the city limits.

Engineers maintain after treatment, the waste water could irrigate 100,000 acres of desert. Cairo is, however, surrounded by hills and the cost of installing extra pumps to move the sewage them is considered prohibitive. Tomorrow: The new metro.

Kohl strikes back at peaceniks

Dr Helmut Kohl's Government announced over the weekend that it is to launch a media campaign to explain its defence policies and counter the disinformation" of the peace movement during the coming hot autumn of protests against Nato missiles.

The newspaper advertisements and information booklets are probably also meant to the increasing general confusion at home and abroad about Bonn's stand on mediumrange weapons and support of the American negotiating position.

confusion was not helped by Bonn's half-hearted attempt to revive the "walk-inthe-woods" compromise at the Genva arms talks, much to the annoyance of the Americans. It has now been deepened by the sudden and controversial demand recently by Herr Josel Strauss, the Prime Minister of on the nuclear trigger. Bavaria, for a dual key, giving Bonn partial control over the new American weapons. Herr Strauss's call, jolting the political turpor that settles over West Germany in the summer, was quickly denounced by the Ministry of Defence, which said it was not considering the question. But it started a fierce debate, which many people suspect was the main aim of the ambitious and maverick Bavarian leader, on an issue that Government and opposition would have preferred to leave well alone. Until now the dual key has not been the issue it is in Britain because of the renunciation years ago by the Federal Republic of all nuclear weapons and the general concesus that Bonn should not have a finger

Some Social Democrats who oppose deployment but are now resigned to its inevitability have embraced the call for a dual key with enthusiasm, including Herr Karsten Voigt, the defence spokesman.

Others, such as Herr Horst Ehrake, who ar anxious to ensure the American President does not take decisions in time of nuclear crisis without the consent of his allies, nevertheless think West Germany would be wakened politically rather than strengthened if it were given a real say and thus indirectly became a nuclear

THE ARTS

The future of London theatre is once The future of London theatre is once again being debated: not the shows, the audiences or the recurring lack of either, but the fabric of the buildings themselves. Recently in The Times. Sir Roy Strong contrasted despondently the disgraceful sears; bars and lavatories of commercial Shaftesbury Avenue with the wide-open foyers of the subsidized South Bank. But there are hopeful signs that the wherewithal may yet be found to revitalize London's great theatre heritage.

The refurbishment of the 1907 Playhouse, Charing Cross, the former BBC sound studio at the Embank-ment end of Northumberland Avenue, is to be financed through the addition of offices above. The Royal Opera House has its own proposals for development to the west of its present site. One section of the GLC has called for a paper on the inture of all London's old theatres, while another has actively solicited pro-posals for rehabilitation of a theatre, ong dark, in its own ownership, the Lyceum in Bow Street

Most London theatres were built when the city's building line was lower, as low as it thankfully still is in Shaftesbury Avenue or Charing Cross Road. But elsewhere old theatres are now surrounded by taller buildings from the Thirties or later. Nowhere is this more apparent than at the Lyceum, off the Strand, and at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, two of the three great theatres which, with the Royal Opera itself, form the Covent Garden triangle.

This triangle, if secured for the next century, could be the crowning glory of the GLC's greatest planning legacy to London: a revitalized Covent Garden conservation area connecting London's West End theatreland via Waterloo Bridge to the arts centre on the South Bank. At all three Covent Garden theatres planning permission is the key issue if the historic fabric of each is to be maintained without unacceptably high public expenditure.

The best publicized of the three is the Royal Opera House. Here the current problem is simply how the hoard is to gain approval for enough development at the Russell Street end of their site to pay for the expensive but necessary package, at the theatre end, of stage extension plus breathing. space for the audience. Already possibilities have been perceived that will provide a more neighbourty solution for the north-east corner of the Piazza than ever was possible with the new 2,000-seat theatre for which the Royal Opera House had persuaded the Government to buy this land. It was this hoped-for home for the Royal Ballet which blighted another vision. This was for a dance theatre for all London-based companies and or all dance visitors to London. However, in February of this year, an imaginative Report on Opera and Dance from an Arts Council Committee broached the subject once again. The case for such a theatre was succinctly outlined and two alternasurvived, albeit dingily, to this day.

Save for the vandalism of the new dance floor replacing, rather than being laid over, stage and orchestra stalls, the damage is largely skin-deep and the auditorium still restorable, Reseated to modern standards the Lyceum could hold 2.500. This is more than Covent Garden, the Coliseum, the Palladium or Drury Lane. With a view uninterrupted by any pillar Lyceum audiences would face a 42ft wide proscenium with up to 52ft of stage beyond, enough to present modern large-scale musicals, whether home-grown or imported from Broadway.

Thus the Lyceum stage is perfectly adequate for commercial runs of single spectacular shows while at the same time being inadequate for companies working in repertoire (there is no room on site at stage level for scenic storage or rehearsal). But ironically the Lyceum's shortcoming as a repertoire house is its commercial asset: this is a tightly planned building with no waste at either end. Once the large cost of reinstating a theatre dark for 44 years had been met the resulting building would be much cheaper to maintain for future generations of theatregoers than could be The cost of reinstating the Lyceum could be met through development, because the Lyceum auditorium is in the middle of a block. Here it is possible both to raise the abnormally low flytower to the height needed for staging major musicals and to build lettable office space over the auditorium without compromising critical street elevations. Such a development, if judiciously planned, might well bring in enough not only to finance the restoration but also to safeguard the theatre's future

Because the GLC is both planning authority and freeholder of the Lyceum it must be possible to devise effective safeguards. However, as with the Charing Cross Playhouse, the central issues will be whether certain theatres constitute special cases and whether planning consents provide their only hope for survival other than massive injections of public money. The whole Covent Garden triangle, not only the Royal Opera House, should be regarded as special. It is Britain's oldest surviving theatre district. If planners permit, London can now seize an opportunity which will give all three theatres new life.

But where would best-seller lists be without their cookery and dieting books - a case more of booking the cooks than cooking the books?

You can learn how to make a pop-up book and, for all I know, John Updike, Willian Trevor, Alan Sillitoe. Anita Desai. David Lodge or Brian Aldiss may tell you how to make a proper book. if the word-processor is making the writing easier for authors, it is having the opposite effect on publishers editors. In the past, an author would deliver his or her manuscript to the editor. The editor would read, and make marks on, the typescript which would be returned to the author for revision, whether major or minor. When the manuscript was redelivered to the editor, the additions or subtractions would be instantly recognizable. Not so now as the author runs the new version through the word processor and the manuscript is mint.

Take pity on the poor, overworked editor having to begin reading again from the first sentence. Will be or she remember what alterations had been ordered?

Behind every great wine, there's a ruthless man.

The French take their wine very seriously indeed. Even low-priced Vins de Pays are closely monitored by Government inspectors, who are notoriously hard to please.

Certainly, in blind taste tests, they won't hesitate to reject a wine that isn't up to standard. In fact, it can take years for a wine to be classified as Vin de Pays.

You can see that the French take a lot of trouble over their everyday pleasures. They've also taken the trouble to keep the price down.

Man's inhumanity to monkeys

By Andrew Tyler

They are known in the biomedical trade as non-human primates, as if to emphasize both their proximity to and their distance from ourselves. This ambivalence provokes a sentimentality which can make us laugh when we see them mimicking a tea party on the vicarage lawn, or choke at the sight of them caged in screeching torment. It can also provide the wherewithal to keep us alive, help us to control our vices, and make some of us rich through a trade which, in global generalities and gruesome particulars, resembles the high days of human

Monkeys and apes have no special talent for music or microcircuitry, but like us they have strong and reckless tastes. Their intelligence can be a source of astonishment; their social own. despatched.

In Florida a few years ago, a female vervet was accidentally caught spreadeagled in the cage wiring of a monkey sanctuary. With no keeper in attendance, it risked a scorching from the sun. A male partner took it on the back instead, by shielding her body with his own and suffering a good deal of dehydration during the 90 minutes of exposure before being released from his chivalrous posture.

Man is often flummoxed when confronted with examples of near-human behaviour in monkeys, even when he has encouraged and stimulated it himself. An illuminating episode concerns Nim. the star of a troop of chimpanzees which had been taught sign language.

Nim was reared during the early 1970s in a pillared mansion at Stanford University in Palo Alto, California, where he wore clothes, helped with the housework (including cooking, sweeping and laundry) and addressed his human fellow-students in the manual language of the deaf. From Stanford he was sent to Oklahoma Institute of Primate Studies, where, with others of his kind, he furthered his "education". The troop and its mentor, Roger Fouts, attracted enormous media interest and not a little academic controversy.

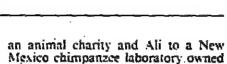

Nim was borrowed for three years by Dr Herbert Terrace, a New York researcher who intended to provide evidence supporting the belief in Nim's high intelligence. Instead he turned first sceptical, then dismissive, calling Nim's efforts at communication no more than imitative hand-flapping performed for reward.

As a result, Fours's programme fell into disfavour and its funding was reduced. The problems were heightened by the tendency of the chimpanzees, once small and charming, to grow large and less tractable. A visiting professor lost a finger when he tried to feed the baby of a surly veteran, and threatened a law suit. There were also attacks on students. Finally the programme came to a complete halt. Several of the animals, including Nim and his brother Ali, were sent to a medical institute in New York state, where they were made ready for the batch-testing of hepatitis B vaccine.

At this point, reports began to circulate that Nim had made signs indicating that he "wanted out". America's animal defenders rose up in rage. The medical institute tried to argue that the vaccine testing involved no cruelty, but they were unable to stem the flood of protest. Nim and Ali were returned to Oklahoma - although the rest of the shipment, lacking star quality, was retained.

Oklahoma, of course, still had no use for the brothers. Nim was sold to Additional reporting by John May (UK) and Many stories indicating parallels between man and monkey seep from far corners of the world, just as there are numerous examples of the working partnership between the two. In southern Thailand, for example, monkeys have traditionally shinned up coconut trees to collect the crop for their owners.

A more sophisticated work project was initiated a couple of years ago at Turts-New England Medical Centre in America by Dr Mary Willard, who trained three female capuchins - the old organ grinder's monkey - to serve in the homes of disabled humans. One of the animals was placed with a paralyzed car-crash victim; she was structures often poignantly mirror our reported to have responded to clicks of the young man's tongue by combing primates are rooted in the shock and his hair, spoon-feeding him and fear of recognition; a monkey which sprucing his apartment with a minia-

Not that the scientific community is_ uniformly insensitive to either the special ethical problems arising from primate use, or to the growing clamour of animal liberationists.

It is symptomatic of the increasingly heated climate that those who do go on record to challenge the liberationist logic - by emphasizing statutory obligations, pointing to the demands of the public and explaining the attempts to find alternatives - can end up receiving phone threats and attacks on

One such is a British man who chooses to be identified as "an international expert in the use and provision of primates for the biomedical. field" - the reticence being prompted by a recent death threat. His view of the animal "defenders" is that they are guilty of both the richest hypocrisy and dissemination of plain lies. "Most of what I read about trapping, shipping and the diseased condition in which the animals are supposed to arrive is frankly incorrect. down their chins, they were sent In the laboratories they are handled by Compared to the treatment received by other animals, such as cattle, they fare

"Ultimately you have to bear in mind that they are not little people. They are animals, and I believe we should make use of them so long as it is done humanely . . . unless, of course, the argument is that we should all be vegetarians and not wear leather shoes or permit horse racing. And that argument is nonsense."

The space race gave monkeys glamour. No such visibility or acclaim attends the use to which they are put in the related field of military research, where they are also proving to be an invaluable resource. Starting in 1957, monkeys have been placed at the sites of American atomic tests, at varying distances from the explosions and heights from ground zero. Some of those which survived were sent for observation to Yerkes Regional Primate Centre, where they developed

Radiation tests continued at numerous military and civilian institutes. In Beihesda, Maryland, for example, irradiated monkeys were taught to run treadwheel, encouraged by the inevitable electric shock. It is estimated that 2,000 primates were irradiated at this one establishment

At another Brooks Air Force Base in Texas, a scandal arose in March, 1980 when the base's principal researcher resigned over what he considered to be the meaningless torture of the animals. Looking back over his 14 years at the base, Dr Donald Barnes sees what he described as "a period of conditioned ethical blindness". He continued: "I snapped out of it only because of the blatant redundancy of the radiation experiments.2

The purpose of that experiment was to gauge the effect of radiation on human performance, including that of an irradiated, dying pilot. The monkeys were gosed with radiation. Then, with jolis of electricity shooting through their feet and vomit trickling "flying" through a variety of what roll modes, in a device known as a primate equilibrium platform. In the early days of the experiment, "death watches" were established so that the last lingering agonies of the animals could be observed. Barnes put an end to that. After 10 hours of "performance" and study, they were put to

The primate equilibrium platform, Barnes says, is still in use today at Brooks Air Force Base. Now it is used largely to test the effectiveness of such anti-nerve gas agents as atropine and benactzine.

Anti-nerve gas work involving primates is also taking place in Britain, although few details emerge from the Chemical Defence Establishment (CDE) at Porton Down. It is, however, on record that the CDE has a colony of at least 1,000 cynomolgus, rhesus and marmoset monkeys; that the majority are bred on the site, and that their primates have been used to test antidotes to SOMAN nerve gas. This year a scientist from the CDE's Trauma Section joined researchers from Queen's University, Belfast and the Royal Army Medical School in a study which involved the firing of "high-velocity missiles" into the heads of members of the rhesus species.

The majority of primate experiments in this country are far more mundane. Typically an animal, confined to a metal cage, is injected with a pilot drug or compound. It will be observed, then dissected. The Home Office registered 6.186 experiments involving primates in 1981, the fast year for which figures are available that was a slight increase on the previous year.

There are junkie monkeys in Britain

it is known, however, that the batch testing of live polic vaccine caused the deaths of about 300 cynomologus monkeys last year at Welkome Laboratories in Beckenham, Kent, and a similar number at the Institute of Biological Standards and Edinburgh all three weeks). Control, where the experiment was repeated.

Records for 1978, the last available year, establish that 1,342 monkeys died at Huntingdon Laboratories in Cambridge. Along with ICI and the Medical Research Council, Huntingdon is probably Britain's largest primate consumer. While it has already said that it would like to consume fewer, it adds that the 1968 Medicines Act, together with the possibility of claims against their clients - the endlessly prolific drug companies - make such grim consumption necessary.

Many of these programmes operate on the assumption that the lower primates are sufficiently like us to be used as substitute models, yet suffi-ciently different that their ultimate fate is of no great concern. The ambiguity is also a potent lure: the identification of that elusive dividing line means that the creatures may be used even more efficiently to throw back the frontiers of knowledge, to purge us of disease and vice, to sharpen our weapons and strengthen our shields. To these ends there are junkie monkeys in Britain testing antidotes to narcotics, alcoholic monkey suffering delirium tremens. and monkeys in Lyons that have been smashed up in French automobile impact tests. It is in America, however, that research descends to the level of the genuinely grotesque. At Cleveland's Metropolitan Hospital in the early 1970s, 18 doctors spent six days transplanting the head of one monkey on to the body of another in order to improve our understanding of diseases of the nervous system. At the US National Institute for Neurological Diseases, chimpanzees are being hit on the head until they die in order to reproduce and determine the extent of cerebral damage in professional boxers. Scientists at the Wisconsin Regional Primate Centre have injected pregnant female monkeys with hormones which produced hermaphrodite offspring.

Wisconsin also sponsored a range of elaborate maternal-deprivation experiments, some of which involved infants enduring six weeks of solitary confinement in vertical metal chambers. A scaled-down version of this programme also ran in Britain throughout the early 1970s at the Medical Research Council's unit at Madlingley, Cambridge. Infant monkeys were separated from their mothers for 13. days, stress signs were identified and when the reunions took place it was solemnly noted that those infants which had been separated the longest showed a tendency to cling most passionately to their rediscovered

Who's for Scotch and Lime?

I once attended a lecture given by Roy Strong (This was some time ago, when he was still plain Dr Roy Strong, and several years before he became handsome Sir Roy Strong, as he is today, though I believe he still makes house calls occasionally to old patients. This is hearsay to a certain extent, patients. This is hearsay to a certain extent, as housesty compels me to admir that I have not been to a lecture by Roy Strong since.)

If Roy Strong was untitled, the lecture was not, it was defiantly called "Rembrands and his brillnence on his British Contemporaries". One thing that became clear after a few minutes was that if there were any important British contemporaries of Rembrandt, he had had so influence on them. Turning to minor contemporaries, Strong demonstrated that they, too, had managed to avoid being influenced by the great Dutchman. What transpired, really was that Rembrandt had influenced nobody at all in Britain. As the art historian who had taken me there said historian who had taken me there said afterwards "We learnt a lot tonight but not I fear, about Rembrandt I wonder why Roy chose that subject".

I still think of that lecture every time I come agross a complete mismatch. I thought of it when I found that Hitchin, in Hentordshire, is twinned with Neitz-St-George, I thought of it even more when I don't through a small Derbyshire village called Whitheld, which classing to be twinned with Paris, But the most recent time I thought of Roy Strong's lecture on Rembrandt and the British was when I learnt that the thether of this year's Edinburgh Festival is Scotland and Vienna". In fact, I bumped facto a man meently who is helping to organize an exhibition on the theme of Edinburgh and Victoria What links are there? I : Not a lot, he said.

I have never, truth to tell, quite understood the old description of Edinburgh as the "Athens of the North". A lot of talking went on in both places, no doubt but would even Roy Strong admit that as evidence? The only teal links I can see between Edinburgh and Athens is that they are both full of unfinished monuments and retired colonels. And Greece, of course, has smilled vine leaves, which are only a kin of open-cast baggis

sideways look at he British way of life

Not much happening on the dance floor of the Empire Rooms in Tottenham Court Road on a balmy Monday evening at 8.00. A single partnerless Rockabilly is doing a work-out at the back of the hall as the disc jockeys wrestle with the sound system. A Gary US Bonds single is smashing its way out of the recalcitrant speakers; and around the walls the chairs are filling up with middle-aged professionals. The editor of Honey is sipping a dry white, and an architect from Faling is waiting for the first Chuck Berry of the night.

Around the bar area the 30 members of the northern coach party are clustering hiding their faces behind their pints. Another knot of New James Deans has assembled on one side of the floor like skaters wary of the ice. This is where the new 21s Club meets, named after the coffee bar in Wardour Street which was the cradle of British rock 'n' roll in the 1950s.

On comes Jailhouse Rock, and the Rockabilly shifts into a higher gear. He has moved centre-floor and has taken off his shirt to reveal a fine brickie's torso with 1950s, tattooing, but in the half-light thrown down by the spots there is no reading the pectoral rubric. Anyway, he has emboldened the newcomers, and now there are half a dozen couples on the floor, cool, quick, serious, well-rehearsed jivers. Suddenly a springy young man with a soldier's haircut has sprung into their midst, a devil-among-the-tailors, and is making the floor look like a trampoline. He is on his back, on his front high in the air, on his side, doing a one-armed press-up. His ankles are boneless, and both his legs seem to have been kneecapped, but he dosen't mind. Like the Rockabilly, who is unimpressed, he needs a partner like a fish needs a bicycle.

The track ends, but there is no silence; only an obscure Marvin Gaye number, with somewhere in the production a drummer let loose like a man beating up a kitchen. Two brothers in Hawaiian shirts are whirling their girls nonchalantly.

At last one of those dirty, randy riffs from Chuck Berry's guitar - the kind the Stones lifted so well - and the joint is jumping. The Rockabilly is surrounded by older styles and younger practitioners; a latter-day Ted or two; a frugger, a jitterbugger, an Ali Shuffler, a Pan's People refugee, many of them engaged in tiny, private, spot-denos. And all the while not a twister in view. There is a man of 60 still sitting it out, tapping one foot rather arthritically and watching a beautiful. blond boy of 10 dance with his mother. Further down the age spectrum there is a boy of six being cradled by an older woman. Surely to goodness the Paddy Riley and Anne Watters, two dolls from Ulster, have cleared the centre of the floor. She is being broomed backwards and forwards between his less and then thrown over his back like a scarf. Weak women get their arms ripped off, a male speciator says with something like satisfaction.

Since the demise of the RPM Club at Leicester

Square, the Empire is the most popular of London's rock 'n' roll venues, although there is a growing number in the suburbs. Jeff Dexter, one of the founding deciays, says the aim of the place is to play the kind of music that everyone wants to hear, and not to make any of the punters feel they are on show. "There was one guy who came and wanted to let everyone know he was a star. So I went up to the mike and said: 'We've got a P. J. Probably here. . . . we get all sorts here. Just look around you. We get lords, ladies, school-leavers, the Pink Floyd's parents." Skirting the perimeter of the floor is a man whose footwork bears the stamp of ballroom training, and it is strange, in such an environment, to reflect on how reviled the new beat music was by those rather grandes dame figures who handed down the starchy measures of foxirot and quickstep to middle-class teenagers whose hearts were elsewhere.

No less strange, for those who were teenagers in the mid-1960s, is all this exuberant evidence of how impoverished by comparison social dancing had become by then - how the twist gave way to free-form nothingness and then duly flopped into the mire of head-banging. What teenager, born circa 1950, does not remember with horror that sense of not knowing what to do when the fast numbers gave way to slow? Of wondering what the hell to do with his foal-legs, not to mention hands, when Tous Les Garcons et Les Filles de mon Age came on the puritable? The rock 'n' rollers had it worked out all along. They could drop a gear or two without any such balletic trauma. Besides which they had been holding on to their partners

So, too, with the music itself, for all the rawness of the days before multi-track recordings, the singers really sang (they had to) and the players really played. As Jeff Dexter explains: "Today's best music leans on high technology. In those days it was made by urgency and feel. The stuff had such a marvellous cry to it."

If you doubt the truth of those words, you only have to see now the dancing at the Empire loses its fire when the Beatles and Stones come on. It may have been a golden age for the British pop industry, but for the rock 'n' roller it was already a time of dross. As for the 1970s, only Bob Marley gets a look-in, with occasionally some Blue Beat and Ska. Perennualism lives in those recordings based on straight four/four times which even the most sophisticated backbeat, à la Glenn Miller, cannot dilute. The great bandleader's In The Mood remains one of the most popular of rock (yes, rock) numbers, and he would surely have been heartened to see the things it makes today's revivalist dancers get up to. MOTHER ROCKER

Katie Erskine, 35 (above) and son Edward, from Finland

I go always with my son Edward (who will be 10 in October). I am divorced now, but I still like to go out and I think it's nice for children to know where mummy goes and what she does when she goes out. We go every Monday in the holidays, not always in the term if he is tired or has got homework. He does take his toys with him. - his of thing, but he is learning to dance and he likes it very much. I've taught his step-sister, who is 11. She is a really beautiful little dancer, very clever, she's even teaching me some things now. I have been going to the Empire Rooms for about a year - I used to go to another place but it closed. What I would like to say about the place is that it is very relaxed, there are no posers or phonies or fights. You don't see many groups of boys, though there were a group of Rockabillys there last week. Rock 'a' roll is the best. But it is very chauvinistic if you think about it. It is the man who pushes you around, throws you about Rock 'n' roll is great fun, a wonderful way of dancing and it relaxes you. You always feel so good the next day. I go with a group of friends about 10 to 12 of us and it doesn't matter if we do not have partners. I don't always dress up because I can't really afford to buy you can, in Portobello Market, find something. I often wear trousers. They don't get in the way.

ROARING FORTIES

It doesn't matter a bit that Tish is 10 years older than me She's a very good dancer. We met when some talent scouts came to the Empire Rooms looking for people to dance in Paul McCartney's new film Give my Regards to Broad Street. The girl I used to dance with had been chosen and this guy came up and asked if I'd dance with Tish and it worked. We were chosen, with about 12 other couples, and spent two weeks at Elstree. We've won a competition at the Empire Rooms the Fifties - the music, clothes, cars - but now I like everything from the late Forties on. I used to listen to my parents' records. Bill Haley, Bobby Darren, Bobby Vee, - then I started to watch Fifties' movies on tele-vision on Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Now I've got a stall in Camden Market where I sell a lot of Fifties' stuff every weekend. A lot of the younger people really like it. At first it may look ugly, but it grows on you... I prefer jive records to everything - Rock Around the Islands, Boogie Woogie Country Girl - and all the Andrews Sisters' stuff. You see people of all ages jiving - I once saw two old guys of 75 and 80 hopping away and dragging all the old ladies in hats on to the floor. I think that's great.

roll music fascinated me. As I got older I started going to clubs. Most of them have closed now - a lot of fights, that sort of thing, which ruined it for everyone else. Steve and I don't enter a lot of competitions, we don't go looking. We enter for a laugh really. We've just won the British Rock 'n' Roll Championships in Nottingham, which was a real surprise. We went in for a competition at the Pink Elephant, won first prize which was a little gold medal and also a heat in the finals at Nottingham. We only had two weeks to practise, but as it happened we didn't meet until the day itself. We only managed to get a

On the floor Steve tells me what he's going to do mostly with his hands, like if he wants to push me round it's hands flat together. If he's going to throw me it's three steps in and out simultaneously, if he wants to throw me back I run up to him. I get most of my clothes at charity shops but can pay up to £30 for a Forties or Fifties, dress. We both love the Big Band sound best, especially Glenn Miller. You can jive to Bill Haley but when swing comes on you feel so bubbly, you can put your whole

I think I find the really energetic movements a lot easier because of this - things like somersaults, backward and forward flips, rollovers and handsprings. I also do a lot of very fast foot movements. I can stay on the floor for any record and keep up the acrobatics for about five minutes continuously. If I've had a hard ומובדו בסי day before, I dance a lot better I started rock 'n' rolling about six or seven years ago in Leicester because it was the "in" thing. Now I take it a bit more seriously and I think people rate the quite highly. I was in Ulster for a while, but I didn't do any rock 'n' rolling there - I had far more particular duties to perform. I haven't got long in the Army now - about a year. I'd like to join the police force when I leave. I suppose if I took rock 'n' roll even more seriously, if I pushed for it I could dance professionally . . I like the music of the late Fifties and early Sixues - the best, no question -Presley, Cochrane, Gene Vincent. And I dress in period, the old drape, winkle pickers, waistcoat and tie. My first preference if I'm going to a night club is to have a good dance, and rock 'n' roll has a lot to offer musically. Several years ago there was some good, innovative music - Glamour Rock, then the Punk period, the New Wave - music which the young could identify with, like the revolution that took place in the Fifties. But for the last couple of years there hasn't been a lot to offer. think I'm a moderate dancer, perhaps a bit better than that but there are many far better than me. Elvis? Great of his genre, but it's ridiculous when you see people trying to imitate him almost an insult. It would be like trying to imitate Bowie. Impossible. I suspect that rock 'n' roll will last a long time - it could be forever. Younger kids coming through turn to rock 'n' roll and then of course there are people who were there at influence will survive.

I do hate this term "rock 'n' roll revival because it never died. I'm a lad from South Shields and Twe loved it all my life. That's my era. I was rock 'a' roll the first time round. You get the odd DJ talking about a revival on the radio playing Shakin' Stevens, but DJs know nothing....rock n' roll's my first love and you know what they say about that - it never dies The young Elvis, recording on the Sun record label, sums it all up - so fresh and new, but he 'died' in 1959 when he recorded It's now or never. I dress in the classic American mode – Rockabilly – baggy trousers, baggy shirt, wide tie; the Teddy Boy look was English. The Teddy Boys only like one kind of music, Little Richard, Elvis at any age - that's not rock 'u' roll to me. The great thing about the 21s is that everyone goes for the same thing and I meet a lot of friends. Cathy's been my partner for four months (we were in the McCartney film and several videos) but she's not a girlfriend as such. You often get girls coming up asking for a dance and if you approach them it's to dance. Try that in a modern disco and (at my age) they'd probably tell you to p... off. I've taught quite a few ladies - it's easy if you've got a sense of rhythm. As long as you can tap your foot in time to the music you should be able to rock 'n' roll.

Dear mum, love daughter

Penny Perrick

After a long stretch in the doldrums, mothers are being rehabilitated all over the place, particu-larly on the Channel 4 series Mothers by Daughters, and in a new book called Mothers and Daughters.* Letter after letter shows writer and recipient getting on well, tossing friendly bits of advice to and fro and behaving so nicely that you'd never think they were related.

The odd murderous mother does occasionally crop up in the book, like this one who's trying to force her 23-year-old daughter to give up the man she loves. ... in my opinion you are well on the slippery slope to lack of self-respect and a future of misery and uncertainty . . . Your father and I can assure you that we have no intention of our deep bond of affection being upset further by your headstrong and selfish attitude of all take and no give." A spate of similar letters, each more threatening and hostile than the last, kept this woman's daughter in a state of semi-depression for

Most daughters were luckier. Their mothers egged them on towards their bearts' desire, in spite of what the neighbours might think. It was George Sand's mother who suggested that she might find men's clothing more comfortable and convenient; it was lawyer Crystal Eastman's mother who encouraged her throughout a tough legal training at the turn of this century: "In the thoughts of the night I saw it all clear, the brave, eternally right choice you are making."

You get the idea from reading Between Ourselves that the tra-ditional mother/daughter conflict is dissolving steadily. This is the one where Mother, who has spent her life in the service of The Family. determines that Daughter must follow suit. Anything that might predispose Daughter towards a life that isn't a carbon copy of her mother's say sexual experience or a prolonged education or a career, becomes the battlefield. Mothers and daughters still have problems but this no longer seems to be the main one, probably because so many mothers have experienced divorce and work and independence for themselves. In fact, a worry shared by many of the letter-writing mothers is that their daughters, out of sheer contrariness, might slide back into the Perfect Wife and Mother role that they themselves fought so hard to shuck off.

"Often I believe," writes one Quintana will rebel, marry at 15 and settle in Queens - determined to be the 'total woman' to her husband". You can almost hear Edith Summerskill's "phew" of relief when her daughter Shirley decides that, like her mother, she wishes to be both a doctor and a Labour politician. For in her blackest moments, Edith had imagined Shirley proving her independence by becoming a Tory lady,

Many of the mothers, due to changed outlook, expectations and circumstances are right in the middle of taking a second crack at trying to grow up, just as their daughters are making their first wobbling attempts to do the same thing. It emerges from their letters that two women, a generation apart, coping with their lovers, their ambitions and their desires can be the basis for a very convenient mutual support group.

Here is a recently divorced mother writing to a recently left home daughter. "Don't be afraid to try. Don't be afraid to fail. Just try again." Loving words appropriate to both her daughter's circumstances and her own. The Grand Metropolitan group is working hard to get women into its pubs. It has introduced wine on draught; it has cleaned up the lavatories; it has instructed its bar staff not to make women customers feel as welcome as the Black Death. In spite of these improvements the pub is likely to remain most women's idea of a ghastly evening out, because there's nothing much you can do there except have another drink. This is perfectly pleasant provided that you can do something else at the same time - accept a proposal, order dinner, clinch a business deal - none of which are possible in most pubs. Until they invent a pub where buying another round is incidental to the evening's entertainment rather than being it, women will prefer to go to the cinema.

I cull this cautionary tale from the Western Morning News. Jean Ton-kin walked past the windows of her house carrying the frame of her daughter's wendy house. A neigh-bour thought it was a gun, and St Austell police took her away and searched the house. They found no gun, but in the deep freeze they discovered bags full of a suspicious herbal substance. "What's this?", they asked the mother of six, at the police station, "Grass", she replied frankly, so they held her another three hours while the laboratory made tests. She was only allowed to see her children again when the lab see her children again when the lab reported that the bags contained lawn clippings, put in to fill the deep-freeze so that it would run more economically.

Recognizing the difference

The high risk of investing in doing anything new can only be justified by the prospects of high profits. These in turn depend upon how well you can keep the competitors out. It may be by capability (you can do competitions out the same beauty) and the same beauty in the same bea something better than they can); or by marketing (you force them to match a high level of advertising); or by legal barriers (you have the mineral rights or the planning permission). American pre-eminence in the marketing is longunderwritten by marketing is longestablished. More recently, Japan has moved into a similar position for the innovations that depend upon its ability to exclude competitors in the market by greater capability.

Consequently, innovation in other countries must rely increasing-ly on legal barriers. As far as manufacturing industry is concerned, this means patents. Tragically, the way in which the patent system has been allowed to develop has made it into a reinforcement of the largest, and now increasingly foreign, firms, instead of an independent basis for investment at high risk. Few innovations can justify the uncertainty and cost of patent litigation. EMI's CT brain-scanner was the received advances in dispractic greatest advance in diagnostic technique since X-rays. The firm's troubles in obtaining and defending patents internationally may have been a factor in its loss of independence: certainly, it never received an adequate reward.

In contrast to its ancient objective of "new manufacture within this realm", the patent system now looks for absolute novelty. It is therefore only open to those who are at the very forefront of technology, which, of course, are increasingly the firms of the US, Japan and West Germany, Furthermore, the subjectmatter must not be obvious to a hypothetical individual "skilled in the art", who is assumed to know everything that has ever been published about it, anywhere, in any language.

It is impossible to exaggerate the economic consequences of this. Although it is the big breakthroughs that attract the publicity, it is through incremental innovations, the countless small changes that evolve out of what has gone before. that products that can compete in international markets are built. Failure to develop one type of protection for innovation does not mean that innovation will not happen; it means that it will take place under whatever alternative system is available, and will be geographically located where that Examination for "obviousness" bars most incremental innovation from patent protection. This type of innovation has therefore had to rely primarily upon the power of greater capability in the marketplace. In a world where the Japanese excel in this, failure to develop the patent system has handed them incremental innovation on a plate.

There are many big innovations which firms of the second economic rank are quite capable of carrying through, if only proper protection by William Kingston for their investment was available. Consider the promising petrol-elec-tric hybrid motor car. The broad combination of the elements in this (two different motors and a micro-processor) is "obvious" and there-

Any investment in developing it can therefore only be made under the umbrella of capability. Even America's General Electric does not regard its own huge strength as offering enough protection, because of the looming capability of Japanese rivals, without a $10 million research and development grant from the US government.

On the other hand, if protection of a really adequate kind was available, the hybrid car would offer an investment opportunity for firms much smaller than GE, in many countries other than the United States. It is the yawning gap between patents and money-making reality, which stops such investment opportunities. Consequently, in many industries, innovation no longer makes business sense, and industrial decline is inevitable. It is to solve just this problem that a new innovation warrant system is needed. It would leave the existing patent system untouched, would run parallel to it, and it should not be administered by the Patent Office.

Like patents, warrants would confer exclusive rights for doing new things but on a quite different basis. They would deal with innovation, not invention, and would be concerned with achieved hardware rather than ideas. They would be explicitly linked to investment.

Their criterion would be bluntly commercial, and would cut through all abstractions. The conferring of a warrant would depend upon the answer to a single, simple question: Is the subject-matter of the application obtainable now in the ordinary course of trade? For instance, can you go out to a dealer and buy a hybrid car? No? Then, an investment to develop one is warrantable. So, too, are all the incremental improvements which production managers in all industries know will be the next small step forward in their products, but for which they are now reluctant to tool up because they know that they will be beaten by competitive capability,

A warrant would be incontestable and would not have to be policed by the warrant-holder. Who would prospect for minerals if the geographical limits of his licence could be called into question at any time? Yet this is no more than any present patentee is asked to do. And why should it be a crime to steal a firm's cash, but not embodied information which it has risked much to generate?

Clearly, warrants would convey far more specific market power to manufacturing firms than anything available to them at present, and they must do so if they are to generate the massive wave of new investment that is needed. What would make this acceptable is a shift from time to money as the measure of the monopoly. For administrative convenience, time might still be used for minor innovations, but for the major ones, a warrant would give its holder a monopoly until he had obtained back as profits a prescribed multiple of his investment. The "multiple" could be varied according to regional or other

Competitors could not object to generous terms in a warrant, since the more profitable an investment turns out to be, the quicker the monopoly would be ended. All the techniques for measuring the value of a warrant in terms of money could be adapted from those already used for monitoring complex de-fence development contracts.

The warrant system also would fit without strain into existing inter-national arrangements. The most relevant of these, the Paris Convention, provides for equal treatment of native and foreign firms. Thus, if the US introduced warrants, Nissan would be just as entitled as GE to obtain one for the hybrid car in respect of investment in the United States. The implications for innovation and employment are obvious. Warrants, indeed, offer a dynamic alternative so protection as a means of dealing with pressure from the Shinto-Confucian world, which can only intensify in the future.

The EEC's expert, Dr Hermann Kronz, is an energetic advocate (as well as originator) of ideas for making patents more effective, and the Commission is now funding research into the warrant concept. The concept has been sufficiently explored to enable legislation to allow a trial in one country - which would cost little or nothing. In Britain, the speed with which the Government's business start-up and business expansion schemes have been adopted, augers well for how quickly innovation warrants might boost investment and employment. A case of urban heart disease the potentially perilous future for Britain's cities should visit Albuquerque, New Mexico, as I did the other day. There are 11 exits from the inter-state highway that lead to Albuquerque, and, driving along, I waited for the one which would take me to the city centre. So I looked out for the tall buildings which I expected would tell me that I was in what the Americans call the business district. And then, when I turned off the highway, an extraordinary and, to me, appalling sight met my eyes.

It was in the middle of the day:

but, instead of being among busy streets of bustling people, I found myself in a dead city. There were hardly any shops. The buildings consisted almost entirely of massive banks, looking like fortresses and often constructed without windows. What little motor traffic there was appeared to be composed dispropor-tionately of armoured vehicles conveying money from one bank to another. Most cerie of all, there seemed to be a strange absence of uman beings walking about.

Clearly, anyone who could afford to do so had got out of the city centre

I explored further. Here and there did see groups of men, mainly dispanic and apparently unem-played. On Central Avenue, which ooked as if it might once have been the city's main thoroughfare, there were drunks and there were pornographic bookstores. It was lear that anyone who could afford to do so had got out of the city centre, which was now the domain the deprived and depraved. Albuquerque, with a population of 330,000, was no longer a city with a iving heart. After leaving Albuquerque, I resumed reading a new book which Penguin has just sent me. Inside the Inner City, by Paul Harrison, documents in degrading detail what in recent years has happened to the London Borough of Hackney. It describes the massive increase in poverty that was created in these lower depths of England's capital city a new under-class almost ntirely lacking in hope.

Public services are inadequate, unemployment grinds down a huge section of the population, rampant crime imposes a daily hazard even on the very poorest crammed into the vilest housing. The greatest ambition of far too many people who are forced to live in Hackney is to go and live somewhere else. The population is falling and even directly comparable, Hackney is on its way to becoming a British version of downtown Albuquerque, a no-go area for almost all except those compelled to remain there; and there are many other places are many other places. Britain where life is just 25

This state of affairs has not come about by accident. The process was tellingly traced in an article I read on the very day I visited Albuquerque. It was published in, of all newspapers, The Wall Street Journal.
This, in part, is what it said:
"In the late 1960s and 1970s.

there was a national consensus that no one in America should have to go to bed hungry. While it was Lyndon Johnson who launched and publicized the war on poverty, many of its most important components were expanded under Richard Nixon.... There was a clear, steady trend away from the majority's long and shameful disregard of the other, hidden America of hard-core hopenidden America of hard-core hope-lessness... But for those whose feelings were accurately reflected by the New Right, it was a cause of concern. Big government was coddling the poor while soaking the rest of us.

"While Administration policies prolonged and deepened the worst recession since the end of World War II. Administration policy also cut back systematically on programs that might help compensate for the bad times. . . . The Administration has a clear sense of its constituency, and the poor are not included." Those words apply precisely to the condition of the poor who live in the inner cities of Britain. Here too, governments of both parties once made it their objective to destroy the underlying causes of poverty. They were not always successful: sometimes their efforts were inadequate or incompetent. At any rate, though, the will and the intention were there

Now they are not. The view in government departments responsible for easing the lot of the poor is that many of them are shiftless good-for-nothings, guilty of creating their own predicament and refertly carable of charging their perfectly capable of changing their circumstances if only they made the effort. So resources have been reduced for the services on which they depend, often literally, for survival. Government funds have been withdrawn from the very places where they are most agonizingly needed.

If Mrs Thatcher wants to witness the logical and inevitable outcomet of the policies she is pursuing, she could do worse than take a trip to Albuquerque. If that is too far, London Transport still operates some sort of bus service to Hackney. The author is Labour MP for Manchester Gorion.

Ann Sofer

From villeins to

Does the Labour Party actually like the British people? I am beginning to wonder. Many of the left-wing analyses of "what went wrong" in the election portray a nation of people who are gullible, selfish, ignorant, prejudiced, hypocritical and generally pretty much beyond hope. "One of the most politically unsophisticated electorates in Europe", as a new Labour MP has dismissively called them.

But it wasn't always that way, runs the theory. There was a golden age when working people were neighbourly, warm-hearted, loyal, altruistic, wise and true. And in that happy time the working class was the majority of the nation, and had the majority of the nation, and had only (through the Labour Party) to get power to spread its moral virtues throughout society. Two things went wrong. The Labour Party betrayed the working class and the capitalist press warped its judgment.

This nostalgia for a better race of men and women is most forcefully conveyed in the writings of Jeremy Seabrook, who blames the Labour Party for having, since 1945, concentrated its appeal too heavily on individual material advance, sacrificing thereby the sense of collectivism and solidarity on which it built up its strength. The same theme runs through much of the commentary filling socialist journals this month. It has an extraordinary affinity with the old-fashioned Conservative notion that the working class, like children or servants or subject colonial peoples, cannot be "trusted" with too much money. If materialism is an evil of our time (and I think it is) it is not one that is peculiarly conspicuous in the work-

As Barry Hindes puts it in a New Statesman article, "the traditional working class who 'automatically' voted Labour . . . has been infected by affluence, consumerism and other consequences of economic growth". ("Infected?") Fred Inglis, in the New Socialist, talks about the fight which the Labour Party has on its hands against a whole host of modern enemies, which include. alongside selfishness and racism, the "confusion of class solubility". A novel phrase. If class barriers dissolve, the implication is woe betide the Labour Party.

This same article also conveys a nostalgic regard for the working conditions of the past. Militancy in the miners' strike, we are told, was solid in the "traditionally mined and dificult-to-work pits", whereas there was no support in the "super pits of the highest technology with their cynically privileged productivity deals". Message: sweat and grime and back-breaking toil produce comradeship: skilled work and an key question, and no joke. It underlies the Labour Party's dilemma over the sale of council houses. The more people get the feeling of ownership, independence and competence, the less their lovalty to a collectivist movement can be taken for granted.

Yet I think it is a mistake to assume that these developments mean that people have become more selfish. One of the tragedies of our crazy electoral system is that the altruism of the majority (represented both in opinion poll data and in the combined vote of the Labour and Alliance parties) is not given effect in Parliament. Most people are prepared to pay more for good public services - particularly health and education - and are horrified at the prospect of the poorest in society, especially the old and the long-term unemployed, having to suffer even more. The massive defections from Labour were not after all to the Tories, but to the Alliance. People wanted a fairer society, but not the coercively collectivist one the Labour Party was offering.

But the Labour Party has stopped bothering to read the British character: it is part of what Peter Kellner has called "the left's elitist arrogance towards the public as a whole". In particular its categorization of the particular its categories. tion of voters as villains, traitors or victims is disastrous. Who sees a flattering portrait of themselves in that mirror? The villains will laugh, the traitors take offence, and the victims will seek out of self-respect to evade the identification. But building up the victim vote is the name of the game. "The only way to win" (said London Labour Briefing shortly before the election), "is to harness the despair of the unemployed, the anger of women ... the rebelliousness of youth".

It didn't work, of course. The unemployed stayed at home ("a sacred cause, but a human disappointment", as Bernard Crick drily puts it); and women and young people in disproportionate numbers deserted Labour for the Alliance. Who, after all, would actually want to identify with those Labour posters showing helpless people being swept down a drain, or pathetic little children confronting a nightmare-huge ladder with a broken bottom rung? Whether or not it is true that we are all specks of dust in the whirlwind of historical inevitability. our only chance of significance lying in coalescence in the "greater struggle"; it is a fatal misunderstanding of the British character to assume that we are happy to see ourselves presented that way.

Reagan's home team plays away The declining influence of George Shultz in favour of the President's old friend

Washington There is widely-held view in Washington that the authority of George Shultz, the Secretary of State, has been so eroded by William Clark. President Reagan's National Security Adviser, that he is no longer the driving force behind American foreign policy.

There is no doubt that on Central America, the foreign policy issue which is most preoccupying the Reagan Administration at present, Shultz is not in the driving scat. Policy is largely being formulated in the White House, where Clark has a basement office, even to the extent that Shultz first learnt about the decision to send American naval vessels and troops to the region when he read about it in the newspapers.

He also appears to have been upstaged in the Middle East since his abortive mission there a month ago ta mission which he did not want to undertake and which was almost bound to fail). The President's new special envoy to the Middle East is Robert McFarlane, Clark's former deputy, and it has not gone unnoticed that his diplomatic team does not include a single representative from the State Department.

Even in the crucial field of arms control the President is relying more and more on Clark. He now heads the key interagency watchdog committee overseeing the Geneva arms reduction talks with the Soviet Union. There has been some speculation in Washington that Shultz had become so dismayed by what was happening that he was contemplat-ing a return to his home in California. This, however, would be uncharacteristic of him. He is not like his predecessor, the volatile Alexander Haig, who tended to offer his resigation every time he did not get his own way.

But there is no doubt that Mr Shultz is extremely frustrated and has told the President so. As a result the White House has recently been trying to push Shultz to the centre of public attention.

Turf squabbles between the Secretary of State and the National Security Adviser have been taking place for years, particularly when such forceful personalities as Dr Henry Kissinger and Zbigniew Brzezinski were in what is now Clark's Job.

In his book Power and Principle Brzezinski recalls the strains which developed between himself and Cyrus Vance, invariably fuelled by a judicious use of leaks by members of their own staffs and often blown out of proportion by the press which is forever on the look out for feuds inside the Administration. Vance eventually resigned. PHS The American system of government, in which there is no collective William Clark is giving US foreign policy a distinctly domestic flavour cabinet responsibility, also lends itself much more to turf fights than the British system. Shultz, Clark and all the other Cabinet members were not elected but were given their positions by a president who remains in office for a minimum four-year term. So there is a tremendous incentive to get the President's ear and be close to him in the White House.

Furthermore, unlike Britain, there are very few career officials in top bureaucratic posts, which are filled by presidential political patronage.

Reagan: lack of interest and expertise in foreign affairs

These American officials, foremost loyalty tends to be to their boss whose cause they fight with the same ardour as knights battling on behalf of a feudal monarch. The present schism between Shultz and Clark - which has also been overblown by the press -differs from past feuds in one important respect. Whereas Dr Kissinger. Brzezinski and other national security advisers were acknowledged foreign policy experts. Clark is not, nor does he make any claim to be. Before he joined the Reagan Administration in Washington, Clark had spent little time outside his native California. For him "abroad" was New York City. His disastrous performance at his Senate confirmation hearings when he was appointed Deputy Secretary of State displayed an almost total ignorance of the world outside the US.

He has learnt a lot since then, but the reason President Reagan brought him into the White House was not because he valued his knowledge of international affairs but because Clark was a trusted friend who had served him loyally during his years as governor of California.

Seen from the State Department. the main problem caused by Clark's ascendancy in the foreign policy field is not so much his lack of expertise but the fact that he tends to view issues from the point of view of the domestic political impact they will have on President Reagan. The international ramifications, as in the Soviet pipeline embargo, often tend

Thus the dispatch of the fleet to Central America shows conservative Republicans that the President is prepared to be tough with Marxists in America's own backyard. The renewal of grain sales to the Soviet Union wins the support of farmers in the important Midwestern states. The friendlier line the US is now taking with Israel is certain to have an impact on the important Jewish lobby.

The problems posed by Clark's unfamiliarity with the world are compounded in the view of foreign policy specialists, by the President's own lack of expertise and interest in foreign affairs.

In the past domestically-orien-tated presidents working in harness with strong secretaries of state, such as the President Eisenhower-John Foster Dulles combination, have proved highly effective. But Shultz, whose main expertise is economic affairs, does not have the strength of personality or the assertive temperament to make the President heed his voice rather than that of his colleague in the White House

One of Shultz's main weaknesses is his passive, low-key approach in dealing with members of the Administration. Yet it was precisely these qualities that President Reagan was seeking when he appointed Shultz to succeed the impetuous Haig. Shultz prides himself on being "team player." If Shultz had managed to achieve a few major attention-grabbing accomplishments during the past year, people would no doubt now be praising his style and deft touch. But he has not. With the election campaign looming President Reagan is now more interested in action that can produce quick results. Does this mean that the professorial Shultz is on the way out? Almost certainly not. The White House is very concerned about the damage that would be caused internationally if President Reagan for a second time. Besides. Shultz and Clark are said to like each other and do not differ on most issues. However, what the present rift does show is that the national security adviser, whoever he or she may be, is likely to continue to play a major if not always the major role in determining foreign policy. President Reagan initially set out to downgrade the job but found he

NATURAL MONOPOLIES

What is the point of privatizing natural monopolies? When a natural monopoly is privatelyowned it must be regulated. If it were not, it would exploit its monopoly power and charge too much to the consumer. But, even when prices are controlled by a regulatory body, the rate of return on capital may be excessive compared to that carned clsewhere in industry, establishing a case for a special levy to reduce the dividends attributable to shareholders. Both the functions of the regulatory body and the rate of the special levy would necessarily be public policy concerns; they might generate as much political haggling and bureaucratic interference similar issues affecting the big state-owned utilities today. So why sell off the assets to the private sector? What would be

These are pertinent questions. There can be no doubt that the case for privatizing natural monopolies is more problematical than the case for privatizing competitive corporations. The differences between a heavily regulated private sector monopoly and a highly controlled public sector monopoly are not, at first sight, all that great, Since the privatization would involve administrative turmoil for management, and some disruption of pension arrangements and work-practices for employees, the change of ownership might seem at best futile and at worst damaging.

But there are differences between private sector and public sector monopolies, even when private ownership is accompanied by regulation. The typical regulatory authority is interested in prices, quality of service and profitability. These are important dimensions of management, but they are not the only ones. There is evidence. that it is other aspects which have caused nationalized industry executives most awkwardness and irritation in their dealings with ministers and civil servants over the last thirty VCBTS.

In particular, decisions on investment and its financing have been subordinated to government's wider fiscal aims. This has caused several kinds of rigidity and inefficiency. recent and important example is expenditure programme largely from trading profits instead of borrowing, although the expected rate of return on investment would be high enough to repay any loans in future and so justify the borrowing option. As a result telephone charges are higher than would otherwise be the case.

This may or may not be a bad thing, but it is surely right in principle for the management of a business to have more say in the pattern of its investment financing than outsiders. In this context Treasury-civil servants, who set British Telecom's external financing limit in relation to the desired level of total public sector borrowing, are outsiders.

Perhaps even more harmful than this form of government interference has been the practice of varying nationlized industries' capital expenditure in order to regulate aggregate demand. The original idea, which dates back to Keynes' advocacy of a "somewhat comprehensive socialization of investment" in The General Theory, was that the Government could boost a depressed economy by raising public sector investment. This was a much-used weapon in the armoury of demand management in the 1950s and 1960s. Whatever its merits in this role, it underminded the independence and efficiency of decisiontaking within the nationalized industries. Investments were timed in accordance with macroeconomic policy objectives, not in order to match customer demand. Unnecessary waste and reduced profitability resulted. If the major utilities had been privately owned, it would have been more difficult for the government to bully them in this

The central argument for privatizing natural monopolies may be summarized as the enhancement of management freedom consequent on government's reduced ability to intervene. Since prices and product standards are likely to remain at least partly - subject to regulation, this strengthening of management freedom is particu-. larly valuable in fields such as financial planning and investment-timing.

This argument applies to British Telecom and supports the Government's proposal for required to finance its capital privatization. It can be taken a lized monopolies.

stage further by noting that telecommunications technology is advancing rapidly. In due course technological changes may allow BT to enter new businesses in information retrieval and dissemination, perhaps in collaboration with private sector companies. If BT were to stay publicly owned its scope for manoeuvre and expansion in these innovative areas would be needlessly cramped.

The granting of more responsibility to management should improve efficiency in the major utilities. But efficiency is not the only consideration. The transfer of functions and powers from politicians to managers should be seen as part of a larger process in which individual responsibility is strengthened and the economic role of the state reduced. If there is a consistent philosophy behind the present Government's approach to industrial, policy, this must surely be one of its guiding principles.

But the Government should not stop at privatization. It should also, as far as possible, transform industries now dominated or monopolized by one supplier into more competitive structures. Few industries are natural monopolies in a pure sense. As is well-known, BT now has to compete with Mercury on trunk lines. There are other, more surprising cases where competition might be promoted. For example, although electricity and gas distribution are natural monopolies, electricity and gas production are not. It would be technically feasible for many rival power stations to supply electricity to the national grid each trying to outbid the other on price. There is nothing inevitable and preordained about the CEGB dominating the production of electricity in this country.

Indeed, BT's privatization might be more acceptable if it were accompaned by convincing steps to increase competition further in the telecommunications market. But, even in the absence of such steps privatiza-tion would be beneficial. Regulated private sector monopolies may be a second-best solution compared to the competitive ideal, but they are a definite improvement on the third or rth-best solution of nationa-

The function of the intellectual in France, at place. least since Zola's time, is to be Some accepted M Gallo's premseen and heard sur la place publique. A silent intellectual cannot, by definition, be pulling his weight. Moreover, M Laurens found the perfect red rag to wave at this particular bull: an article by M Max Gallo, a novelist who has taken service as government spokesman, telling his fellow intellectuals to pull their socks up and get down to a spot of constructive social thought. Sounding almost like some Mrs Thatcher of the ideological market place, M Gallo sternly reminded his colleagues that recourse to the state cannot and must not be the solution to every problem". France, he said, must become once more a place where ideas ferment". As if that were not enough, Le Monde followed it up with an investigation by one of its reporters, M Philippe Boggio, who wrote that the left-wing government was profoundly disappointed by the lack of support it had received from intellectuals; that it had tried in vain to seduce them with offers of subsidies, embassies, posts of cultural counsellor or missions abroad," including, incredibly enough, an attempt to make the philosopher Michel Foucault

Scidom can an editor have had cultural counsellor in the United between the Socialist State and

ise, that the level of ideological debate in France has declined in recent years. One, indeed, somewhat maliciously pointed out that this came close to confirming the much quoted remark of the Wall Street Journal, à propos of the government-sponsored international gathering of intel-lectuals in Paris last February, that "France is a nullity in the contemporary active world of culture"; and went on to cite M Gallo's own prose as a sad example of what he was talking about.

Others vigorously contested the charge that France is not at present "a place where ideas ferment". "Fermentations," wrote Mme Hélène Parmelin, are generally quiet and deep, what is visible on the surface being often misleading, and I cannot see, in music, in painting, in poetry, in theatre, in dance, or in literature, that this country is falling asleep as everyone insists on proclaiming ..."

M Gallo himself suggested that the left had come 10 power at a moment when the ideological initiative had already been seized by the right. "Is political victory", he asked, "only the belated deposit of an already ebbing intellectual tide?" A good question, which several writers did not hesitate to answer in the affirmative. The alliance with the Communist Party seemed, to most, especially anachronistic, for intellectuals in general are now as powerfully repelled by that party and all it stands for as in former times they were attracted by it.

For many of those who took part as students in the great would be revolutionary happening of May 1968, not only communism but socialism itself has now become an object of contempt. This revulsion was expressed by the so-called "new philosophers" of the late 1970s. For M Jean-Edern Hallier, a member of that school of thought, "socialism and culture are metaphysically contradictory and historically irreconcilable He maintains that idelogies of all sorts have had their day, and that "we must re-invent everything, starting with the left itself".

It transpires that while by no means all French intellectuals have descried the left, most have. no desire to be ambassadors, and most admit to being disap-pointed with some if not all aspects of the left's performance in office. None of them, mercifully, want to be the official eulogists and apologists which (if M Boggio is to be believed) the government was hoping they would be. Intellectuals by and large, as many of them hastened to point out, feel called on to intervene politically only when they see something to criticize or to oppose. "Can one imagine the intellectuals satisfied or, worse, obedient?, asks Professor Madeleine Reberioux. For the love of France, let us hope not.

It is perhaps disappointing that the Conservatives should display one standard when in Opposition but another quite different standard when in government. Is it too late to have an appropriate conference at which the whole question of party

Religious viewing and the ratings

From the head of Religious Programmes, Television South

Sir, Thank you for your accurate and well-timed comments (leader, August 18) on the problems faced by ious broadcasters in ITV. May I add a couple of points.

The re-scheduling of ITV's religious documentary output to 2.00pm on Sundays take place in a carefully created climate of worry about the commercial competitiveness of ITV. Yet, on the very day of your leader, the companies reported a 22.3 per cent increase in ner advertising revenue for July, follow ing a June increase of 17.6 per cent. Peak viewing in London was the highest since 1979, and, late-night, the highest since 1977.

The facile assertion that viewers reject religious programmes should not go unchallenged. As the BBC continues to demonstrate with programmes as popular as Songs of Praise and as distinguished and revealing as much of Everyman, religious programmes, properly edited, funded and scheduled can and do contributé both ratings and distinction to the output.

While no doubt the apparent progressive rundown in resources and production values of the principal occupant of the 6.00pm Sunday slot has contributed to the negative ratings situation there, a glance at the BARB chart shows that the audience on Sunday afternoon opts finally for BBC not at 6.00pm but two hours earlier, Religion doesn't lose the viewers: it suffers, with everything else, from a bad schedule. Of course the issue now goes far beyond this particular problem and you rightly call for urgent attention to it by both IBA and BBC Governors. But it is for the churches, too, to make an ureent and severe reappraisal of their relationship with the two authorities. For too long they have accepted client status as the unspoken price of their protected position: but it is to them in the end that producers and Governors alike look to insist that this simply is not good enough. Yours mithfully

ANGUS WRIGHT, Head of Religious Programmes, Television South,

From the Reverend Canon M. M.

Sir, Thank you for your leader "Religion and the Ratings'. The television religious programmes cater for the elderly and those who cannot get to worship in their own accustomed church.

These are the members of society "forty winks" at the time who enjoy "forty winks" at the time when ITV intend to place their religious programme.

They, for the most part, really time when they can participate. There should be a debate, and even commercial companies especially should remember all the age ranges of their listeners or lookers. Yours sincerely.

Supporting Mr Steel

From Lord Mayhew

Sir, Some of your readers may be in danger of confusing the views of London Liberals with those of the London Liberal Party and its chairman, Mr Darracott (August 19). This is a mistake which those who know the Liberal Party well have long since learned to avoid.

The London Liberal Party, as Mr Darracott makes clear, holds that final authority for our election manifesto should rest with our standing committee, with its majority of non-parliamentary activists, and that the manifesto should include policies approved by the standing committee, even though the Party leader and the parliamenlary Party oppose them.

It also believes that non-parliamentary activists should intervene in the appointment of parliamentary spokesmen: last year it called for my own resignation as parliamentary spokesman on defence. On constitutional issues, the London Liberal Party thus follows broadly the guidelines laid down by Mr Tony Benn

By contrast, London Liberals support the principles and practice of parlimentary democracy. We also have confidence in our party leader, David Steel Yours etc.

Clarification of the Soviet threat

From Dr Robert McGeehan. Sir, It was refreshing, in the summer doldrums, to read your two-fisted leader of August 18, which swatted both Russian expansionism and its Western apologists, the latter typified by (but not limited to) the editorials one might find in The

The analysis of "the Soviet challenge", however, begs for further conceptual clarification of that clusive bugaboo, the Soviet Threat. There can be no question that Russian policies are less then benign, but is the challenge the same as the threat?

The other side of the coin of the ony cordon sanitaire thesis is the facile assumption of the utility of Soviet military power and the putative possibilities this bestows upon Moscow's capacity to engage in blackmail.

The huge Russian military machine is, of course, very unpleasant to contemplate; but what, exactly, might it do? To whom? Under what circumstances? While we have indeed been surprised by Soviet aggression from Czechoslovakia to Afghanistan, Russia's use of force remains strictly limited to cases where they think they can get away with it, excluding in particular those states protected by the Atlantic

The Soviet challenge, in the light of the strategic stability guaranteed by nuclear deterrence, is really a challenge to the Russians themselves: as a matter of direct concern within their polyglot empire, and as a samble in the selection of potential victims who might be assisted by Western powers.

The deeper problem we in the West must grapple with is how to identify a threat which goes beyond a challenge and - even more difficult in a time of recession and nostalgia for a failed détente - to agree on what to do about it without frightening ourselves more than our

August 1968 is not, in my judgment, as forgotten as you suggest. What are discarded are the mistaken notions that Soviet policy is simply defensive and that "good relations" can rest upon any base less sturdy than a stable balance of

Libyan views of Chad

From Mr Nagi i Bouzareiba

Sir, The present conflict in Chad is of sufficient significance to justify concern and a place in your leader column ("Eating people is wrong", August 16). However, by accepting a series of fabricated allegations which claim Libyan intervention in Chad. and ignoring the role of the United States in destabilising the fragile stability of Chad under Mr Goukouni Oueddei's presidency, the conclusions you reach are understandably at fault.

Firstly, you overlook Libya's concerns regarding the stability of Chad, which lies on our southern borders. It is natural, in view of the American threat to the Libyan Jamahiriya which you have reported frequently, that we view the conflict there, and the foreign intervention by the United States and its allies, with concern. It appears, from your editorial, that you accept that France and the United States have a legitimate role in Chad, but we have no right to express our interest.

The Libyan position, which Western newspapers appear reluctant to report, has been consistent and clear. The Jamahiriya believes that stability in Chad is crucial to the whole of the region, and. moreover, that this is dependent on national reconciliation between the warring factions. Mr Goukouni Oueddei headed such a government of national unity, created with the help and blessing of the Organization of African Unity.

More important, Hissène Habré not only led a revolt against Goukouni's government, but did so with the direct backing of the United States. Only last June the House of Representatives intelligence committee in Washington was told by a CIA official how the agency provided $10m in funds to finance Habre's rebel forces in overthrowing Goukouni's Government. It is justifiable, therefore, to blame the United States for subversion in Chad, and for being directly responsible for the present war.

the United States. The pressures exerted by Washington, directly and indirectly, on France to intervene must be condemned. The claims of Libyan intervention, we would suggest, have been deliberately fabricated by Habré and the Americans to justify an internationalisation of the war and a military build-up in the area by American forces, which are now staging "manocuvres" in Egypt, Sudan, Somalia, and Oman. The possibility that this might be to provide a cover for an American intervention in Libya poses a serious threat to world peace, and yet receives no comment in your editorial, although President Reagan's enmity towards Libya and Colonel Gaddafi is no secret. It stems from Libya's legitimate decision, as an independent sovereign state, to reject America's strategy in the region and our opposition to the imposition of Zionist control over occupied 'Arab lands, supported by the United States. The Chad conflict is now being used by the Americans as a cover for their provocations against Libva.

Nevertheless, a settlement in Chad is urgently needed to ease the tensions in the region. Only a few days ago. Musmmer Gaddafi restated Libya's position which includes no Libyan or foreign intervention in Chad, and the removal of all foreign forces from that country. We continue to call for a government which will reconcile the different factions in Chad, and believe that peace and stability there is dependent on this approach.

Vacation village

From Sir Neil Marten

He seems to think there is some mystery why Club Mediterrance failed to build its village by the due date. No mystery; it was their commercial judgement. Others, who took a different view, did invest $13m on the same island. Mr Hooley calls them, in his letter, foreign speculators".

He complains that the Government has "airily dismissed" the select committee's genuine worry about drug trafficking. Not so. What was dismissed was the committee's conclusion which had no supporting evidence.

He then goes on to refer to the TCI as a "haven for tax evasion," Mr Hooley's criticisms, no doubt well-meaning, are the very stuff of the politics of the left.

As I said when I gave evidence to the committee, let us wait and review it in a few years time when the Club Med village is operating. That is the time to judge the effectiveness of the decision to inprove the airport with taxpayers money. Yours sincerely, NEIL MARTEN. Swalcliffe House, Near Banbury,

Local council losses From Mr C. M. Reddington

Sir, It may well be a vain hope to try to halt the hare first set running by Mr Sparrow in Public Finance and Accountancy and now sent further on its way by your Local Government Correspondent (August 15), since the headlined conclusion that local authorities "lose" £200m buttresses some of the current prejudices about local government accountability and efficiency and I fear that it may already have passed into the realm of accepted fact. But the facts in my own authority are somewhat different and illustrate, all too clearly, the danger of drawing quite a different purpose.

Liverpool is listed as the local authority with the third highest amount of unallocated administrative expenses in the country. Of the £8.8m quoted, £8.4m represents the 1983-84 partnership programme which at budget time had not been

Economics at school level

From Mr Bryan Hurl Sir. If Sir Keith Joseph would care to return to his old school next month he could sit in on the course of "Economics" here at Harrow which I, and a younger colleague, teach to each year of the sixth form: we seem to have already anticipated what is causing anxiety in the mind of one of our Old Boys.

The inverted commas were chosen with care. All reputable schools have flourishing A level courses in economics; but I cannot believe that this difficult and numerate social science is quite what is intended in the current debate. And if economics is diluted down to, say, O level standard, it becomes fairly meaningless.

For the rest of the sixth form what is appropriate is consideration of current economic problems. It demands a lot from the teacher as there is no formalised text and pupil participation is essential: its topicality and intrinsic importance have pupil appeal.

The aim in the course is to examine the source of our standard of living, the importance of economic growth, weakness of the balance of payments, worry over deindustrialisation, the reasons for the "English Disease". An inevitable conclusion to the course is the insight that many of Sir Keith's fellow MPs, of whatever political persuasion, are themselves sadly ignorant of simple economic insights. In which case we seem to have come full circle: his anxiety is justified.

Yours faithfully. BRYAN HURL Harrow School, Harrow on the Hill, August 19.

Body and mind

From Professor Margaret J. Christie Sir, Mr Garratt's reminder (August 18) that good medical practice has always involved appraisal of the patient's total environment is timely: in today's heated exchanges we tend to forget the inheritance from past millennia. At a later point (1818) in history Heinroth used the word "psychosomatic", which still serves to describe the activity of appraising the totality of a patient's

The psychosomatic approach in contemporary medicine has both clinical and research components: the former involves much which may be regarded as "art" while the latter provides the "scientific" foundations. Such foundational research, often undertaken by psychophysiologists, includes the investigation of those physiological processes and pathways whereby the effects of environmental stimuli perceived by the individual and classified as "threatening" or "worrying" - become translated into somatic disorder. This "scientific" examination of the translation of psyche into some complements and underpins the activities of the clinician: there are no . . competing claims of body and mind". Yours faithfully, MARGARET J. CHRISTIE, Professor of Psychology. University of Bradford. Bradford, West Yorkshire. August 18.

Back to basics

From Dr Kenneth Surin

Sir, Your editorial today (August 10) on the World Council of Churches seems to rest on a basic misconception. In it you argue that the Council should do more to "narrow the gap between the ordinary Christian in the pew and the council". But what if the "ordinary Christian in the pew" is serenely untroubled by the realities of racism, social injustice and political oppression? What if this Christian clings to a purely personal faith precisely as a means of averting his or her gaze from these very realities?

"He who says he abides in him ought to walk in the same way in which he walked" (I John 2:6). The way walked by Christ led him to denounce the cruel and dehumanizing practices of the society in which he lived. In walking the way of Christ, that is, in fulfilling its prophetic function, the Christian Church may be called upon in certain situations to denounce the ways of the "ordinary Christian".

Hence, the very existence of such a gap between the "ordinary Christian" and the World Council of Churches may indeed constitute living proof that the member churches of the Council are after all fulfilling their prophetic function. It is possible, therefore, that the crucifying task of witnessing to this prophetic function may require the Church to maintain the very gap that you appear to want abolished If this is true, then the World Council of Churches would do well to ignore the advice proffered in Babies are always at risk when bath water is being emptied. The essence of the old idea of penitential mortification was lost when it became the petty legalism of eating smoked salmon sandwiches instead of ham on Fridays, and made ridiculous when eating a morsel of Friday meat was regarded as an equal sin to murder. But behind those corruptions was a correct insight.

OBITUARY

MR BENIGNO AQUINO Unrelenting opposition leader in Philippines

on his return to the Philippines from exile, was for years an unrelenting opponent of President Marcos, though it was to the President that he owed his life and subsequent permission to go to the United States after he had been sentenced to death in 1977. He was 50, had belonged before becoming a member of the Nacionalista. Party in the 1960s, Aquino developed as a likely candidate for the Presidency, but in 1972 martial law was imposed and he was detained on charges of murder, subversion and illegal cossession of Erearths.

From then until 1980 he was detained in a military camp. Through that time, and includ-ing the period when he was sentenced to death by a military court, he refused to yield political ground; at one time he fasted in his cell to dramatise his cause. .

There followed extended legal and political moves, until the President, having vainly appealed to Aquino to forget the past and join him in building a new Philippines society, released him in 1980 to go to the United: States for heart surgery.

Aquino then accepted a Fellowship at Harvard University and did research at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; but none of this resolved the fundamental issues hanging over him, as it were. He continued to fire broadsides

In 1967 Aquino was elected to the Senate at the age of 34. short of the statutory age requirement that a senator must be 35 or more. The Senate electoral tribunal had to confirm his election, which was challenged by the President's party.

Having now taken the stage of national politics as the youngest member of the Senate, Aquino's rhetorical skill and great ambition made him a formidable opponent of the Government. Changes needed Goldsmith says

Sir James Goldsmith said yesterday that, like many other British institutions, the Press Council had been "penetrated" by people opposed to freedom and democracy, and as a result had lost credibility.

Speaking from Miami after whether it was genuine was dence for its allegation that at upheld, but that the council had upheld by the Press Council the trial of the spy, Geoffrey also deplored his behaviour, Sir ilioo diliowy sa dilise es his campaign for reform of the council, which he had begun eight years ago.

The Council criticized The Observer for unjustifiably bringing Sir James's name into two reports with the intention of embarrassing him by innuendo. Sir James's complaint con-cerned two articles written by Mr Michael Gillard, which respectively appeared to link him with the Italian banker, Roberto Calvi, whose body was found hanging under Blackfriars Bridge, London, and with a company run by Mr Justin Frewen, which was then under investigation by the department of Trade.

The adjudication said, in part: So far as the first story is concerned, the Press Council cannot accept that pressure of time, can excuse the publication of so significant an inaccuracy which, in the context and by the conclusion drawn from it reflects unfavourably on someone's reputation.

The Press Council is not satisfied The Press Council is not satisfied that the links between Mr Frewen and Sir James, such as they were, were sufficient to justify the introduction of Sir James's name into the second story.

The Press Council, therefore, finds that Sir James's name was unjustifiably introduced into both stories.

The complaint against The Observer is upheld.

In nature, Charnov said, the tilt apparently can go toward cither sex, depending on conditions in which the animais are living. But, he added, the literature is so full of conflicting reports that the controlling elements are still uncertain.

Another explanation offered FDR an excess of females in populations under stress has been that newly fertilized eggs impregnated by a male sperm are more vulnerable to genetic defects. If the male chromosome is damaged, there is no replacement. But if the egg has been fertilized by a sperm bearing the female, or X chromosome, then the egg has two X chromosomes, one from each parent, providing a substitute.

In a report last month the Grylls study group chaired by Lord King and set up by Conservative MP for Surrey North West, Mr Michael Grylls, roundly condemned successive governments and Whitehall for failing to appreciate industry's financing needs and elaborated two achemes to cut the cost of long-term investment finance.

by British industry was high-lighted last week by Government figures showing tha the level of capital spending in the economy fell by 1.5 per cent in the first half of this year compared with the previous six months.

Apart from encouraging investment, the Government hoped to reduce industry's reliance on bank borrowing. thereby making it casier to control the money supply.

The group argues the net cost to government would be small when higher output and revenues were taken into account.

The Grylls group has pro-posed allowing companies to borrow medium/long term from approved banks and institutions but pay interest net of corporation tax thus improving cash flow. Last week's convertible stock, which appealed building to cieties with cash back in their pockets, was a timely winner. But it has not always been so. While government stocks have become more exotic, techniques seem more traditional

Meanwhile, new blood has brought more sophisticated techniques to gilt-edged jobbing, a particularly vital part of the funding process as jobbers have the delicate task of making books in a huge market where the Government, over a period, is usually a massive seller.

In this symbiotic relationship, the government broker has an interest in helping the jobber to keep the market stable. But the two sides are jockeying for Although futures turnover is comparatively small, it enables the jobbers to bedge their positions on interest rates, greatly strengthening their bargaining power. This is much to the chagrin of leading brokers, the third element in the gilt-edged triangle, who hate to think of the jobbers so profitably outsmarting them.

The Bank of England while approving the futures exchange, does not allow the government broker to operate in it.

The futures markets help funding by increasing effective liquidity. But th present arrangements make the government broker's task even harder, since he has to play the game with one hand tied behind his back. It would not be surprising if the authorities

Third World theories attacked

By Michael Prest

If it had been suggested a few years ago that an orthodox counter-attack against "devel-opment economics" would be prompted by the Third World labouring through the worst recession in half a century, the idea would have enjoyed limited currency. But that is precisely what has happened. By assembling the findings of emprical and theoretical work the most concise and cogent rejections of "development economics"." The orthodoxy lies in the derives its force not from a over the past decade or so. Mr initialistic restatement but from Derek Lai has delivered on the the empirical evidence. It is the most concise and cogent argued that countries with the fewest restraints on trade have grown the fastest (Taiwan, South Korea and Singapore are frequently mentioned) while those who retreated into resources. The neo-classical autarky (Ghana, Tanzania and assumption that people respond for a good part of the post-inderationally to changes in relative pendence period, India) have paid the price for believing that they could outwit the market. The most telling aspect of the case against government intervention and direction - what Mr Lal calls the "dirigiste" is that it has not employed the analytical tools of welfare ecnomics. Mr Lal is careful to draw a distinction between But the counter-attack laisse-faire and the market economy. He is not advocating privately-run fire brigades. Instead, he says that if the techniques of welfare economics were applied to analysing the consequences of government policy, the outcome might be the "second best" strategy. *The Poverty of Development Economics: – by Deepak Lai, Institute for Economic Affairs, Hoban Paperback 16. £3.

On the exacting cross country course on Saturday, Mystic Min-strel, watched by the Prime Minister and her husband who are on holiday near Zug never put a foot wrong. He will not got to Badminton again, but Miss Bayliss does not rule ouy? the possibility of the Olympics.
In the team event. Britain unusually, let themselves down on the cross country. Of the four riders only Mrs Green went clear. Regal

In a tense finish to the European self and the intense heat, which took sell and the intense near, which course its full during the afternoon, had no adverse effect on the compact little horse, who started life as an Australian stock pony.

Diana Clapham, on the Hon Simon Fraser's Windjammer, the first to go for Britain, went round beautifully until the water, where she went in too fast and had a fall costing her 60 penalties. As a result of Miss Clapham's misfortune, the of wiss Cappean's mistorium, inc rest of the team were told to pull right back before the fence, advice which failed to benefit Miss Holgate on British National Insurance's Night Cap who, having had a superb round until then, went in too slowly and had one refusal and had one refusal.

Lorna Clarke, on Danville, collected 60 penalties when they fell at Horsens Bridge. Despite tearing ligaments in her shoulder. Mrs Clarke continued without further

The Swedish team started the showjumping with 31 points in hand over the British, thanks to the super cross country performances by Goran Briesner on Ultimus, and Persson on Joel, All four British had clear rounds in the showjumping, assuring them of the silver. The Swedish collected 20 faults, but the old medal remained deservedly theirs. Ultimus, whose rider Breisn er is based with Lars Sederholm in Oxfordshire, was the only horse out of 51 starters to complete the cross country course within the time.

After his Burghley over the last three years, Ultimus must nowlay claim to be the most finest cross country horse of his generation.

Hewson on target for All Blacks

Australia ..

New Zealand .. Sydney (Agencies) - Allan Hewson's reliable kicking guided New Zealand's All Blacks to an 18-8 win over Australia at the Sydney cricket ground yesterday. Hewson landed four penalties and converted a first-half try by the centre Warwick Taylor for a total of 14 points. In contrast, Australia's David Campase failed with his four kicks at goal, altough the home side outscored the All Blacks by two tries to one.

A 44.000 crowd saw the Australian forwards dominate the scrum, but fail in the kicks and mails. The Australians, who trailed 12-8 at half-time, had 70 per cent of the possession in the second half but failed to break through the All Blacks' determined defence. Two more penalty goals in the second half gave New Zealand a 10-point lead which the Australians rarely looked capable of overcoming. CYCLING

Devastating finish caps Elliott's comeback

By John Wilcockson Malcolm Elliott, the Common-wealth Games road race champion from Sheffield, returned to top form yesterday to win the Whitby Regatus event in north Yorkshire. He used the finishing sprint that won him five stages of the Milk Reva cauter this year to outlack a group of 10 riders at the end of a gruelling 78 miles. It was just the boost Elliott needed before travelling to Switzerland next week for the world

The hero of yesterday's race was Phil Bayton, the Kidderminster professional, who twice made long. ione breaks on an extremely hilly surface. Bayton began the action right from the start, and he led for 15 miles before being joined by nine chasers, who included last year's winner. Sid Barras, and three members of the Great Britain amateur team but not Elliott

The front group moved to a lead of two minutes, and it seemed that the race was over. Starting the second of the two 30-mile laps. Bayton again went clear before the main group began to close; then 21 men came together, 30 miles from Bayton maigrained his lone lead Baylon maintained his tone lead until five miles from Whithy, when the race ended in a frighteningly fast sprint finish. David Gardiner, from Ulster, led the charge, but he was overhauled just before the line by Elliott, while Barras came with a late burst to take third place.

Tonight at Manchester, Baylon and Barras will be doing builte in the fourth race of the Kellogg's championship, Phil Thomas will be defending his overall lead. On Saturday, at Hull, Thomas confirmed his good form by winning a 3(4-mile circuit race shead of Steve oughtn and Bayton.

American notebook

Buoyancy prevails on all fronts

The American economy is still going through a period of rapid economic growth, low inflation - and the recent disturbing rise in interest rates looks like ending.

There is increasing evidence that the Federal Reserve Board has taken steps over the last three months sufficiently forceful to bring under control ing the middle of last year.
Friday's announcment of a $500m (£331m) drop in money

M1 in the week of August 10 was a sharp defeat for bond bears and dollar bulls who lannched a offencive on Thursday and Friday. The fall is money M1 was larger than appeared, as the previous week's figure was revised down by $200m, so that the unrevised drop in M1 was $700m. In the week to August 10, the nation's basic money supply M1 fell $500m to a seasonally adjusted $516.9m (£342m). On Thursday and Friday, bonds suddenly weakened, beginning lunchtime on Thursday. Between then and the Friday close, bond futures lest 36 points out of the gain of 99 points made between Wednesday August 18 and

The dollar stopped declin-ing on mid-Thursday and started to make some small

Also on Friday, the Dow Jones service carried a specu-lative report that Swiss sources were saying there would be a rise of $34bm in MI. If this had happened; the bears would have made enormous profits. As it is, they have lost badly. A half hour after the announcement of the money

figure, the 10-year 11 1/8 bond of 1993 rose from its low of 101 3/32 to 101 17/32. The 30-year bond, the new 12 per cent on 2013, rose from 102 18/32 to 103 6/32. There will most likely be a further rise today as the bears try to cover their losses and as confidence increases on the bond markets, leading to a window of opportunity? for bond prices, as outlined by Dr Robert G. Smith of Capital Corporation, the New York money management firm, in a bold and optimistic forecast of rising bond prices last week.

Pointing to the sort of weak corporate credit demand out-lined by Dr Smith was Friday's report that corporate profits rose 14.7 per cent in the second quarter, way above "consensus expectations". It is this sort of vigorous rise in corporate profits that will play a huge role in preventing the "crowding out" that the Kaufman-Wojailower-Yardeni say is a threat.

Looking back, one can see powerful evidence of slower money growth in America. It is slower money growth that will raise bond prices and knock the dollar - as last week's dramatic market movements

In the two months ending on June 8, money M1 rose $15.1bn and the "adjusted monetary base" (the liabilities side of the Fed's balance sheet - banks' reserve and currency rose $46n. But in the eight weeks since June 8, Money M1 has risen only $2.6bn and the "adjusted monetary base" has risen only $800m.

Other indicators of a continning tighter Fed policy include the marked stability of "non-borrowed reserve", of the banks in the past three months; the rise in "net borrowed reserves" of the banks to the recent level of more than $450m in the past two weeks; and the the rise in the federal funds interest rate from its level of 6,5 per cent maintained between last Dec-ember and May to its present range of about 9.5 per cent.

It remains to be seen whether the Fed is able to stop whether the Fed is able to stop itself from overdoing restraint in money growth. In the past three years, this has been the patter. A period of excessive money growth followed by no growth in money.

There was little in money between April-October 1981 and between January-July last year. If we are entering year. If we are entering another period of "dead stop" in money growth this will eventually stifle the recovery. But that danger is still some way off. Two factors which will moderate the effects of slower money growth on the present recovery will be the revival of the velocity of money and the emerging weakness of the

Bland's belated breakthrough

John Bland, of South Africa, finally achieved his long awaited breakthrough on the European circuit when he holed from eight feet for an eagle three on the last green at Fulford yesterday to win the £110,000 Benson and Hedges International, Few golfers can ever have felt more relieved, for not only has Bland flattered to deceive on so many occasions on our soil, but he also came within a whisker of handling the £18,330 winner's cheque to Bernhard Langer, of West Germany, after leading by three strokes with six to play.

True, Langer applied the pressure in the most magnificent manner with an astonishing inward nine holes for 30. But at the seventeenth it was Bland who made what might have seemed this morning a catastrophic error when he took three puts from less than 20 feet. By that time, Langer was standing beside the eighteenth green after completing a round of 67, and Bland was now required to make a birdie at the 488 yards closing hole to the his rival, let alone win, instead, he made a sudden death ply-off unneccessary by striking a superb two from from 214 yards out. rolled eight feet past the hole and MOTOR RACING some cause for optimism.

In fact, by the close, there were signs that Invicta can hold their place in the second division. Their defence, penetrated four times by Cardiff, proved remarkably resolute for long periods and, 20 minutes from time, they managed to put their visitors under intense pressure, largely due to the half-fit. Alexander, who came on as a replacement for the werary Van Bellan, just after the break It, was he who brought about Invicta's only try, touched down by invecta's only try, touched down by Lane. Amid scenes of jubilation, invecta's showmanship was put on inal. Yet they did the proper thing, and an up-beat version of Jerusa-lem, meant to be obsered wheneverand an up-near tension of tension of the side touched down, was quickly stifled, perchance it distracted Hopkins's goal kick.

Victory goes down to Azzura

Newport, Rhode Island (Reuter)

The Italian yacht, Azzurra, kept alive hopes of forcing a run-off for a place in the challengers finals of the Amenca's Cup by beating Britain's Victory 83 on Rhode Island Sound on Saturday. Azzurra defeated Victory 83 by 50 seconds over the 24.3-mile course. Azzurra now has three victories against four defeats compared with Victory '83's five wins and two defeats. The former England coach, Tom Wisman, whose Hongkong team have now played both Canada and England, was asked to predict the outcome of tomorrow's game. "It just depends on who gets to play their game," he said. "I give England the edge in talent and international experience and Canada the edge in size and power." da the edge in size and power."

England's women have had a much harder time. Bruised by their 43-76 defeat at the hands of Australia on Saturday, they were embarrassed by New Zealand's under-23 team yesterday. Against a side only included in the draw to fill a last-minute vacancy, England were dragged through three periods of overtime and an undignified dispute over a key basket before winning 76-73.

Without a fast break or much conviction near the basket, England failed to convert even one lay-up against the trough Australian defence. They had a little more success against the mobile zone of the young New Zealanders and Carol Andrew sank 31 points.

Drew Sewell had another surehanded day for the men's team, scoring 30 points at better than 85 per cent from the field. Paul Stimpson (23); Dave Gardner (18) and Peter Jeremich (11) were the other leading scorers. conviction near the basket, England

Swinburn in heated duel with Piggott

A crowd of 6,500 packed the enclosures at Ripon on Saturday to watch one of the most exciting day's sport of the season. Five of the six races were won by less than two length. Lester Piggott sent his followers home happy after winning the ICI Petrol Handicap on Monongelia and the Wool Selling Stakes aboard Who Knows The Game. In the last race, the Monkton Stakes last race, the Monkton Stakes, an enthralling battle between Walter Swinburn on River Of Kings and Piggott on Danseur

The two horses were locked furlongs. Inside the distace the odds on favourite, ridden by Piggott, looked to have the race wion, but Swinburn forced River Of Kings' head in front for a victory by a short head. As they passed the post, Piggott appeared to give Swinburu a nudge. It then looked as though the jockey stood up in his stirrups and leaned towards his colleague. Swinburn alleged that Piggott had pushed him, an heated exchanges took place as the jockeys awaited the subsequent inquiry. The Stewards took no action and the two men shook hands afterwards. Swinburn said: "It was all in the heat of the moment and yet another example of Piggott's amazing will to win at all costs." In the finish of the Great St

Wilfrid Handicap Tony Ives on Azaam challenged strongly in the last furlong, but Philip Robinson kept Never So Bold going well to win by a neck. This victory represented a fine feat of training by Robert Armstrong, as the Habitat coll had not been seen in public since disappointing in the Britannia Stakes at Royal Ascot. Never So bold will now be prepared for the Ayr Gold Cup.

Swinburn: head in front and Sandown Park. But the accolade of the afternoon must surely go to Willie Carson after his patient and determined handling of Falstaff in the Solario Stakes at Sandown. Lear Fen was withdrawn because of the firm going and El Capistrona started favourite at 9-4. As in an earlier race at Newmarket Falstaff fought hard for his head in the early stages. However Carson not only persuaded Lord Porchester's Town and Country colt to settle, but the style and strength of the jockey's finish was something at which to marvel. Gradually increasing the tempo ot his driving. Carson forced Falstaff's head in front to beat Quick Work by a neck. The courage of Dick Heru's twoyear-old has now won him three of his last four races. It is good to hear that Gorytus will now join Schuss in a dual stable onslaught on next Saturday's rich prize at Good-wood, the Waterford Crystal Mile, Carson will of course ride the horse on whom he finished fourth to Caerleon in the Benson And Hedges Gold Cup Following David Nicholls's five-day suspension for his riding of Soba in the William Hill Sprint Championship at York on Thursday, the jockey has decided to lodge an appeal.

French win Prix Morny for stable team double

French Racing Correspondent French Racing Correspondent Mahmoud Fustok had the pleasure of seeing his colours carried to victory for the second time in two years in the Prix Morny, when Siberian Express put his six rivals in their place at Deauville yesterday.
Two years ago Green Forest carried the same colours to victory in the six furlong event, and he, like Siberian Express, was trained by Mitri Salibra and ridden by Alfred Gibert.

Gibert.

Siberian Express finished two lengths ahead of Ti King with Masarika a neck away third and Defecting Dancer a further head back in fourth place. Indigo Jones was a distant sixth. The betting market was totally dominated by Lester Piggott's mount Defecting Dancer, who was backed from 11-2 down to joint-favourite with the Ara Khan's Masarika. Aga Khan's Masarika.

Aga Khan's Masarika.

An exceptionally attractive colt by Caro, Siberian Express cost $230,000 at the 1982 Keencland Sales when he was bought and selected by his owner. He was selected by his owner, He was quickly into his stride, Alfred Gibert, soon bringing him across to the rail and the pair were never thereafter headed. They beat off the challenges of Masarika, Defecting Dancer and Sicyos, and were not troubled by the final effort of Ti King.

Piggott has no excuses for his slightly disappointing fourth place on Defecting Dancer. The pair had every chance when placed behind the eventual winner a furlong from home, but Defecting Dancer was running on well at the finish.

Lakatos subtly delivers a two-fisted blow

The British 18 and under grass court championships, sponsored by Prudential Assurance, produced a remarkable boy's singles champion at Eastbourne on Saturday: Anton Lakatos, who was born in London, of a Hungarian father and an Italian of a Hungarian father and an Italian mother, was unseeded but beat four seeds in consecutive matches unusual in that he hits two-fisted on both sides and, consequently, needed time to compensate for a restricted reach, prefers to play on Lakatos beat the left-handed Richard Whichello, 17 months his iunior, 6-1, 6-4, after Whicello had led 3-1 in the second set of a final cariched by contrasts in personality and method. Whichello, highly-strung and sometimes tetchy, sensibly tried to keep the rallies short but lacked the weight of shot to hustle Lakatos with the consistent pace that is hostile to subtlety.

Lakatos, who has composure without arrogance and confidence without conceit, had enough time to explore a wide factical range. He delily nudged the ball this way and that and worked Whichello into without the ball the b vulnerble awkward positions. Laka-tos plays two-fisted because his first racket as too heavy for him. He attributes his sudden advance to the toughening effect of more than three months of clay court tennis in Both players want to compete full-time. Lakatos is hoping for a sports scholarship that could take him to university in Alabama next month. Whichello left school last month, and will spend most of September at the National Training Court at Buham Abber personne. Centre at Bisham Abbey, preparing champronships at Telford in Whichello, aged 16 years and three months, and Suzic Mair, six months younger each played 11 singles in two weeks. It says much resilience that they wan the 16 and under championships and then reached the 18 and under finals.

Miss Salmon left school two years the rest of her youth.

Mayo takes youths' title the hard way

pronship came to a splendid climax at Sunningdale on Saturday, with a victory for Paul Mayo, of Wales, by constroke over Craig Laurence, the English senior champion. The winning score, 290, was 12 over par according to the card, but the card is a lying jade. A more realistic par, particularly in the rock-hard conditions, would have been the standard scratch score of 72, which would have given Mayo's series of 71, 73, 73, 73 its proper recognition. As it was, it was thoroughly disconcerting to see scoreboards carried round the course recording extronomical, and patently unfair, statistics. pronship came to a splendid climax

There was a tendency, therefore, to exaggerate the shortcomings that are only to be expected at this level are only to be expected at this level tunder 22) and malign the players instead of the course, whose greens in dry weather might baffle a Watson or a Ballesteros. It may seem sacrilegious among the game's top brass, but Sunningdale's New course, even in mellow conditions. is unsuited to a crowded pro-gramme, with its claustrophobic areas of inter-linked greens and tees

Nevertheless, the final match was an absorbing, high-class contest, as the tension grew and the threat from behind of Philip Parkin, the

Seriously though, the M.D. of an Incentive and Conference travel specialist company (recently moved) needs a new "right arm". Excellent secretarial ability forms only a small

And what, you may ask, will this paragon receive in return?

Well, on the positive side, a job with infinite variety and responsibility in a business field which is creative and challenging. On the negative side, a huge workload, irregular hours and problems that would make a saint swear (so does the MD, by the way).

TUTTION ALL SUBLECTS Unition - ALL SUBJECTS - All Lendon Districts, Redakes, (Education Unlimited 01 390 1312)

The Times Guide to career training

Is there a life outside the universities? Diversity is often said to be the hallmark of the British educational system. This is certainly true of our higher education provision. But the danger is that the variety of courses may be confusing to the uninitiated may be comusing to the immunated parest or student. So if, following A-level results, you are looking for the first time at higher education outside the universities; do not be alarmed if it all seems very confusing. In reality, for the purpose of choosing a course. of degree-level study, the ground rules are very simple.

Basically, outside the universities, there are two main classes of higher education institutions - the polytechnics and the institute of higher education. The important point is who awards their degrees. And the answer, almost but not quite univer-sally, is the Council for National Academic Awards (CNAA). So, for example, whether you go to Plymouth Polytechnic to study history or the neighbouring College of St Mark'and St John (an institute of higher education) to study the same subject you will emerge at the end in eigher case with a BA from CNAA

In short, if you find yourself in the middle of a crisis revision of plans following A-level results, do not bother with the politics and bureau-cracy of the educational establishments but focus on particular courses, subjects or disciplines, without minding too much at this stage where they may be. The wide range of subjects in the sciences, arts, social sciences and technologies can be sliced up in many different ways, but these days perhaps the most useful way is between "vocational" and "non-vocational" courses. Many students at the age of 18 or 19 feel ready to make a long term career decision and start training for their future. Others are intent on extending their academic and educational qualifications. It is this distinction which, in real terms, may be most important. Consequently, anyone who has submitted (and been disappointed in) an application to a university for law or accountancy or engineering or, indeed, most of the other vocational courses, should find that the course is duplicated in CNAA degrees at polytechnics or institutes of higher education. With one or two exceptions (such as medicine) vocational courses used to be regarded as being rather less grand than the pure sciences or humanities. The realism of the 1980s, however, has quashed that, "There has been a tremendous upturn in interest in degrees which prepare the students for employment", said one careers adviser.

My own guess is that this trend will end up as the normal practice, especially as the Government has made it clear that encouraging vocational courses is its priority. A few months ago Sir Keith Joseph wrote, in connection with mediumterm planning of non-university higher education, that he hoped "priority will be accorded to scientific

In his second article for Alevel school-leavers. Edward Fennell discusses the vocational degree courses at polytechnics and institutes of higher education and technological provision of value to industry, to the operationa needs of industry, commerce and the professions, and the meeting the future needs of employers more generally."

So with the political trend moving in favour of vocational courses, candidates for higher trend education. even at this late stage, would be well advised to give them serious consider-ation. When the polytechnics were formed, it will be recalled, their main purpose was to develop courses of this type. To some extent, this is still the area in which their strength lies. Athough there is some residual élitism about the status of non-university institutions, this is often misplaced. As William Waldegrave, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State explained last spring, There are various nonsensical binary line nobbisms to be overcome." Probably the best example of this "nonsense" is in engineering where it is common knowledge to graduate-recruiters that a number of polytechnic courses are superior to their university equiva-lents. As John Burgoyne, of the Engineering Industry Training Board, said recently, "It really doesn't matter at all whether you happen to go to a university or a polytechic. The important thing is the quality of the individual course and whether it individus some practical experience of includes some practical experience of industry. Employers always look more favourably on those who have had a taste of real life engineering rather than those who have just done it academically. So, where many vocational subjects are concerned, a sandwich course, or one which involves a "practical placement" is usually a good plan. Almost all the CNAA engineering and technology courses are four-year ndwiches, compared with only a minority of university courses. Out-side the élite technological universities (such as Brunel, Aston and Salford) students are therefore likely to do just as well on a CNAA course as at most universities.

Much the same can be said for business studies, where again it is the non-university institutions that have neered courses which incorporate practical placements. Consequently, whether it is a a mainstream degree like the one at Brighton Polytechnic which covers economics, accounting, business law and so on; a more specialist course like the one in computing in business at Huddersfield Polytechnic; or even the slightly exotic European business administ ration course based at Middlesex Polyteclinic, which involves two years of study either in Rheims or Reutlingen, there is a standard oneyear industrial placement for all.

Equally attractive for these vocational courses is that many of them exempt students from the examinations of various professional bodies - for example, in accountancy and personal management. There are also a number of rather unusual courses in the non-university sectors targeted on to specific career fields - for example, souring administration, information systems, and public administration.

Outside the universities, there are also the vocatioan B Ed. degrees for prospective teachers. Some vacancies still remain on these course, not because there has been a dearth of candidates frightened off by news of teacher unemployment, but because the colleges - whether polytechnics or institutes of higher education - have been tightening up their admissions

Advice on the bookshelf

Kogan Page's series of "Careers" books has three new titles, Careers in Classical Music by Nella Marcus Careers in Surveying by David Crawford, and Careers in Publishing by June Lines (Paperback, £2.50

The first covers composing performing, teaching, administration, broadcasting, journalism, and the basic principles of music, piano tuning, instrument building and maintenance. It also has a section on competitions, vacancies, courses, and a hist of useful addresses.

The same format is followed for the book on publishing, bearing in mind that it is a profession, in the words of the introduction, "with no specific entry qualifications" other than a certain amount of luck, persistence and aptitude, but it is one in which almost any area of knowledge is useful. The text points out pitfalls as well as opportunities, and has a short list of useful contacts.

Training and professional qualifications play a much greater part in surveying, and the third of these books contains a table of earnings and prospects which is far more encouraging to the beginner than anything in publishing or music. Information is a very important factor in deciding on a career, and these little books are

Tobol, the computer, has the names of the terrorists stored inside it, but Tobol has developed a belief in the sanctity of life and rafuses to disclose the man's identities to the director of UK International Security, Charles Hammond. Thus the problem artees of how to re-program Tobol in order to get it to reveal the names. Starring Charles Gray as
